NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—As a sporting proposition, the cup race of 1906 proved the greatest in the history of automobiling in the United States. It is estimated that $50,000 will change hands as the result of today's race.
Clear up to the start of the race the wagers were spirited.

During the night more than $25,000 was wagered at the Garden City hotel.
The largest single wager being $6,000 to $2,000 made by Jesse Levinson, on Tracy and his locomobile. He was a heavy favorite.

Wagner had a host of other supporters in the betting. He was backed for hundreds of dollars at even money against any individual selection. Later his backers demanded 2 to 1.

The amateurs and the general crowd of small betters played Lancia as their choice.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—A sputtering, snorting light blue streak, breathing continuous flame, shot across the finish tape in the Vanderbilt cup race shortly after 11 o'clock this morning, and Louis Wagner, in his French Darraco, had won America's most famous automobile race. It was a thrilling struggle, but such a toll of death and accident did the cars exact, that William Vanderbilt Jr. declared his doubt that if ever another race would be run.

The speed of the race produced one tragedy as dramatic as it was terrible. Elliott F. Sheppard, driving his mighty Hotchkiss car at top speed around Krug's corner, struck and killed his own best friend, Bert L.
Gruener, a wealthy resident of Passaic, N. J. The victim was hurled fifty feet. Sheppard, not knowing whom he had struck, sped on. Afterward, when the truth was told him, he broke down and wept.

Sheppard's car was disabled by the accident and he was forced to quit the race.
He will be placed under arrest, according to the sheriff of Nassau county.

The crowd which lined the danger points of the course seemed utterly reckless of its own lives and those of the drivers. Hundreds surged out on the track repeatedly, and many of the accidents were due to this cause. After the first cars finished the course became overrun and this fact compelled the calling off of the race. Lancia finished a close second, Duray third. The time of the winner was 4 hours, 50 minutes and 10 2-5 seconds for the 287 miles.

Before the race was half over one man had been instantly killed, a boy fatally injured and half a dozen spectators bruised or maimed by the unruly cars.

Ralph Baldwin, a youth of 14, of South
Baldwin, Conn., was struck by Tracy's car at East Norwich and carried dying to the Mineola Hospital.

Dr. Wellschott seriously injured John
C. Reeks, a youth of Port Washington,
L. I., when his car went into the ditch from the "dip of death."

Racebound automobiles likewise exacted a terrible price from the general public. John A. Stadler was instantly killed in Long Island City, and a dozen injured on various roads to the cup course.

The contest was in doubt to the very last minute. Few of the half million spectators were certain that Wagner had won the race when he sent his car over the tape in the last lap and sputtered down the course to his quarters.

He was cheered as a possible victor,

LABOR PARTY FILES PETITION

Once Refused by Secretary of State Curry, It Is Now Accepted.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by the Hearst News Service over longest leased wire
in the world.)

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 6.—The Union Labor party petition for a place on the official ballot at the general election to be held November 6 was filed tonight by Secretary of State Curry on the advice of Judge Peter J. Shields of this city after Curry had once refused to file the instrument because the headings and the affidavits that originally accompanied the sheets of signatures had been detached from nearly all the sheets.
The petition was offered for filing by
O. A. Fietz as chairman and J.
S. Parry as secretary. It was in the form of a long roll and carried 17,774 signatures, the roll being made by attaching the sheets from which the headings and affidavits had been cut off. In pasting the sheets together the signatures were attached to a general heading presumably the same as the separate one that had been detached. The affidavits that had been eliminated from the petition were offered separately, Parry explaining that the affidavits and headings had been cut off to make the petition compact.

as Vincenzo Lancia, in a 120-horse power Italian car, had been cheered when he completed his last round a few minutes previously. A figuring of lapsed time gave the race to Wagner by three minutes, 18 2-5 seconds. This is the third time a French car has won the race.

Antoine Duray was third, separated from Lancia by the narrow margin of 16 seconds. Albert Clement of France was fourth, closely followed by Jenatzy, who drove a 120-horsepower German car into fifth place.

CROWDS STOP FINISH.

As the leaders completed the last round the spectators broke all bounds and crowded over the hard, oil-covered racing path. The danger to the crowds and to the drivers was so great that the other cars were not permitted to finish.

It was a dismal morning, with fog hanging over the course and the surrounding Long Island meadows. For miles on each side of the main stretch of the course automobiles of every kind were packed so closely that their hubs touched.

All of the seventeen entries, cars and drivers were at the mark in front of the big Westbury grandstand at 6 o'clock.
The officials decided to wait fifteen minutes for the fog to lift. From the beginning it was evident that the enormous crowd was going to cause trouble.

On his first round, Tracy, the most popular American driver, stopped at the grandstand to declare that it was almost impossible to race under the crowded condition of the track. Mr.
Vanderbilt at once telephoned to the congested points announcing that the race would be called off unless the spectators kept back.

Under improved conditions Tracy rounded the course with record-breaking speed, making the fastest lap of the day. He covered the 2.1 miles in 26 minutes 31 seconds, or at the rate of about 67 miles an hour. This was the only thing the Americans in the race had to show over the foreigners.

RECONCILED, GOULD AND WIFE AT RACES

cently in Mr. Gould's yacht, Mrs. Gould demanded the dismissal of the superintendent of the castle. Mr. Gould refused to let the man go and an estrangement between the young millionaire and his wife followed. Mrs.
Gould went to the St. Regis. She told a friend, in explaining the quarrel with her husband over the superintendent:
"I could not permit an employe to disregard my orders on my own place."
Mrs. Gould is a woman of strong and hasty temper. She has determined that in the law courts on several occasions when she has appeared there in response to actions at law brought by dismissed employes, costumers and others. That she would brook no interference with her will in respect to the retention of any servant is easily understood.

The determined of Mr. Gould in the matter of the superintendent came as a surprise to his friends.

When Howard Gould married Katherine Clemmons, the actress, in London, somewhat suddenly, he almost forfeited his fortune.
In Jay Gould's will there was a provision that if any member of the family married against the wishes of the others their inheritance should revert to the brothers and sisters. While the family objected strongly to Howard's marriage to Miss Clemmons, none took advantage of the clause in the father's will to strip him of his millions. Apparently, however, they did not care to have much to do with him socially, and left him and his wife severely alone.

DAUGHTER OF WEST A BRIDE

Miss Frances Fuller of California Weds Washingtonian.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by the Hearst News Service over longest leased wire in the world.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Miss Frances Fuller of California, and Ewald Wagman of this city and recently of New York, were married today in Philadelphia. Miss Fuller has been living in Washington for two or three years as the guest of Colonel Lewis Smith, U. S. A., and his wife.

Recently Miss Fuller left Washington for a trip north, after which she proceeded to San Francisco and looked after some property injured by the fire. It has happened, however, that she and Mr. Wagman met yesterday at Atlantic City, where each had a party of friends and the marriage took place. Mr. Wagman notified his friends today of the happy event. The bridal couple left Philadelphia for New York and will probably go to San Francisco.

POLICEMAN TOLD THE GOVERNOR TO "C'WAN"

NORRISTOWN, Penn., Oct. 6.—A travel-stained and weary-looking man, who had arrived from New York, stepped out of a late train last night. He carried an ordinary looking grip-sack as might be expected in any of the big cities. He was dressed in a dark suit, and with the exception of a few dollars in his pocket, he had nothing to show for himself. He was looking for a room to stay in, and had an hour to wait for the trolley. The third man looked across the street to the in-viting looking steps of the Penn. Trust Company building, and taking a seat on the granite stairway, buried his head in his hands.

A few minutes later Policeman Warren came along. He saw the long figure on the steps, and touching the stranger on the shoulder, said:

"See here, you must move on. We don't permit loafers on these steps." "All right," replied the stranger with a quizzical smile. "As I don't want to be run in I guess I'll move." "Governor," exclaimed the policeman, recognizing the Chief Executive.

"I am," replied the Governor, smiling at the policeman's confusion. An apology was tendered by the policeman, who said that complaints had been made by the bank officers, but Governor Pennington complimented the policeman upon his performance of duty.

FIVE MEN STEAL 800 POUND CANNON

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Thieves entered the grounds of the United States government arsenal at Watervliet, N. Y., and stole a brass cannon about two feet in length and weighing about 800 pounds. The gun was lifted over a twelve-foot wall on the back of the Erie canal and carried away in a boat. It required four or five men to lift the gun this distance, and it is considered peculiar that the men escaped detection by the guards. The commanding officer at the arsenal, Lieutenant-Colonel MacNutt, ordered that the matter be referred to the police.

'POLICE WIN AT GAMBLING'

—DIST. ATTY.

Santa Clara Official Says San Jose Is Wide Open to Such Games.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by the Hearst News Service over longest leased wire in the world.)

SAN JOSE, Oct. 6.—"Chief of Police Thomas W. Carroll's statement to the contrary, gambling is wide open in San Jose today. The town is honey-combed with Chinese lottery and fan-tan games. The police know that these games are running. There is no doubt in my mind on that point.

"I am also firm in my belief that the stories of police connivance which are freely circulated are true. I am led to believe from these rumors, and from what evidence I have been able to secure that bribe-money, or hush-money, is being paid to certain authorities or employees of the city for protection. True, I have not in my possession at the present time evidence to warrant so grave a charge as this. But nevertheless, from what I have learned from my own detectives, there appears to be no doubt on this score.

"I propose to root out gambling from this city. I will keep the pledge I made at the Democratic county convention a few days ago. I said at that time that I would continue to wage relentless war upon the gamblers. Within the past few days I have been busy gathering evidence. That evidence is positive, and there is every reason to believe those whom I intend to arrest will be convicted."—Statement of District-Attorney James H. Campbell.

Wm. bitter and relentless, has been declared upon the gamblers of San Jose. District-Attorney James H. Campbell has again taken up the cudgel of the law. He has again essayed to attack vice in its varied forms. In this crusade which was started yesterday District-Attorney Campbell is acting independently of the police. He secured evidence yesterday from nearly a dozen Chinese lottery and fan-tan dens. That evidence he intends to use in the prosecution of the law-breakers. From the district-attorney's office all day agents of Campbell's were sent into nearly every Chinese gambling den in the city. These dens were all found to be running wide open. No difficulty was experienced in entering these places. The money in many places was in plain view. The players, some of them white men, others Japanese and Chinese, were seated about the tables.

President Wheeler is apparently partial to the peek-a-boo. When asked for a statement today, he said: "I do not care to say anything further than that I consider it merely a matter of taste whether or not the diaphanous shirt-waist should be worn by the women of the university."

Mrs. William Keith, the wife of the artist, and who is president of the Political Equality League, is in favor of the peek-a-boo under certain restrictions. She said when seen by a TRIBUNE reporter tonight: "It is largely a question of how far you can peek. It all depends on the girl. Some girls like to attract attention and are likely to wear waists that are all but immodest, to say the least. Other girls possessed of good taste will wear peek-a-boos that are catchy without being the least bit improper, even when viewed from the Puritan standpoint."

Varina P. Morrow, a well known college belle, said tonight: "I do not believe that Dr. Brown-sill consulted her sober second thought when she attacked the peek-a-boo waist. Her attention had probably been attracted by some particularly flagrant instance of peek-a-boo dress wear and it may be that she condemned the peek-a-boo before the class for the especial benefit of one individual."

Miss Mary Robert Blossom, a graduate student of the university, who has been prominent in college social circles, thinks that Dr. Brown-sill was justified in denouncing the open-work shirt-waist, but declares that the college girl who wears an objectionable peek-a-boo is an exception. No, she did not use the word "peek-a-boo." She said that the term savored of slang and conveyed a wrong idea of the open-

WORKING SHIRT-WAIST. "I do believe," said Miss Blossom, "that some of the girls do appear in waists that are entirely too décollete for campus wear, but I look upon such girls as exceptions. The warning, however, that was given by Dr. Brown-sill to the girls of the freshman hygiene class was timely. As long as shirt-waists that offend against modesty are seen on the campus or the streets of Berkeley a warning is in good taste."

MRS. WILLIAM KEITH.

STAND MATRONS BACK CENSOR

Declare Dr. Edith Brown-sill Issued Timely Warning to University Women.

BERKELEY, Oct. 6.—The all-absorbing theme in the college town is the peek-a-boo waist—whether it is a proper garment, even for a university girl—or whether it should be abandoned as being improper and immodest. The fanny creation of the dress-makers' art is now the principal topic of discussion at the women's clubs and but little else is heard over the tea cups at the sorority houses and exclusive club functions.

There are two sides to the question that was broached in Berkeley for the first time when Dr. Edith Brown-sill appeared before the girls of the freshman class at the university, and as their instructor in hygiene, warned them against wearing "peek-a-boos." She branded gauzy waists as being entirely immodest and improper for a college girl's wear.

All summer long the most prominent girls of the State university, and especially those who pride themselves on careful dressing, have been appearing in college class rooms in peek-a-boos. They have resented the criticism that has been heaped upon them by Dr. Brown-sill and are free to express their views on the matter. On the other hand, many staid matrons are taking sides with Dr. Brown-sill in condemning the diaphanous upper garment.

PEEK-A-BOO WRONG? WELL, IT'S A QUESTION HOW FAR ONE CAN PEEK

FAIR CHAMPION PUTS IT UP TO THE GIRL MERELY MATTER OF TASTE, SAYS PRESIDENT WHEELER

MRS. WILLIAM KEITH.

Declare Dr. Edith Brown-sill Issued Timely Warning to University Women.

BERKELEY, Oct. 6.—The all-absorbing theme in the college town is the peek-a-boo waist—whether it is a proper garment, even for a university girl—or whether it should be abandoned as being improper and immodest. The fanny creation of the dress-makers' art is now the principal topic of discussion at the women's clubs and but little else is heard over the tea cups at the sorority houses and exclusive club functions.

There are two sides to the question that was broached in Berkeley for the first time when Dr. Edith Brown-sill appeared before the girls of the freshman class at the university, and as their instructor in hygiene, warned them against wearing "peek-a-boos." She branded gauzy waists as being entirely immodest and improper for a college girl's wear.

All summer long the most prominent girls of the State university, and especially those who pride themselves on careful dressing, have been appearing in college class rooms in peek-a-boos. They have resented the criticism that has been heaped upon them by Dr. Brown-sill and are free to express their views on the matter. On the other hand, many staid matrons are taking sides with Dr. Brown-sill in condemning the diaphanous upper garment.

KILL VICTIM; DEFY POLICE

Arkansas Negroes Fire on Two Men and Escape Dynamite.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by the Hearst News Service over longest leased wire in the world.)

ARGENTA, Ark., Oct. 6.—John B. Lindsay was killed and his own son, William Lindsay, a policeman, was shot in the head and arm in Argenta, on the north side of the river, at 8:40 o'clock tonight, by the Colium brothers, Robert and Garrett, negroes, who conducted an undertaking establishment. It is believed that several other negroes were in the undertaking establishment and took part in the shooting.

John B. Lindsay and his son were walking at the time. Without warning the negroes opened fire on the two men with Winchester. The older Lindsay was instantly killed. His son is believed to be fatally wounded. Both men lay upon the sidewalk for over an hour the occupants of the undertaking establishment firing at every person who attempted to take them away. The police of Argenta were unable to reach the scene and a call was made upon Sheriff Kavanaugh, who organized a posse, which surrounded the house in which the Colium brothers and their friends were barricaded. Sheriff Kavanaugh decided to dynamite the rear rooms of the building and a call was sent for the fire companies of Argenta. Lines of hose were laid and the first dynamite charge shattered and put out the lights in the building. The second blast opened the door and the building. Several deputies entered the building, but neither one of the Colium brothers or any of their friends could be found.

The officers expect to capture them before morning, and when arrested they will be taken to Little Rock, on the opposite side of the river, and placed in jail.

NEGRO SHOOT; RACE RIOT ON

Two White Men Wounded and Mob Quickly Captures Assailant.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by the Hearst News Service over longest leased wire in the world.)

MACON, Ga., Oct. 6.—A repetition of the Atlanta race troubles was narrowly averted here tonight when two prominent young white men, Will and Horace Adams, were shot at the Fair grounds. A mob quickly formed and captured a negro who is supposed to have fired the shots. While he was being dragged out of the grounds with cries of "Burn him," the police succeeded in rescuing him and hurrying him in a patrol wagon to the city prison. The mob followed to the jail and a riot alarm was sounded.

At midnight a crowd numbering between 500 and 1000 is in front of the jail, but it is thought the police have the situation on hand.

Macon is still with visitors attending the State fair and for a time there was intense excitement, and several attempts were made to drive negroes out of town, but the police were generally successful in quelling these disturbances.

What caused the trouble between the negro and the white men cannot be fully learned, as the former refuses to talk and the latter are in a semi-conscious condition in the hospital.

The two wounded men are prominent in the community and this added to the anger at the Fair grounds. Both are members of the local National guard.

At a session of the Georgia General Assembly, passed a law providing for the construction of others. The most important one now under construction is the Alaska Central, which will run from Resurrection Bay north to the head of navigation on the Tanana river, the two points being approximately 400 miles apart. This road when completed, will connect the Gulf of Alaska with the waters of the Yukon and the waters of the interior by an all-American route. Forty-six miles of railroad have already been constructed.

Another important road under construction is that known as the Alaskan Short Line, to run from Ilamna, on the west of Cook Inlet and the head of the Alaska Peninsula, across the Kuskokwim to Arriv, on the Yukon. Other roads are projected.

The Autotone Piano

Naturally the first question one would ask is, "What is it?" It is what the name signifies—a piano in which the tone can be produced automatically. It is a combination of an upright piano and the newest, most complete and ingenious mechanism for producing music by means of a perforated roll. It is an ideal piano and a musician's piano on account of its beautiful touch and finely regulated hand keyboard. It is also a novice's piano because within its case are means by which all classes of music can be played without the slightest study or practice in a manner equal to that of great artists. When played by hand there is nothing about the piano to distinguish it from the usual upright.

There is no influence in a home so refining as that which is produced by good music. Until recently we have been dependent upon some member of the family to produce this refining influence, but with the advent of this new combination, the Autotone piano, it is all changed, as any member of the family above the age of five years can play with the greatest of expression.

This great invention is being adopted by some of our most prominent educational institutions as a means of cultivating appreciation of the best class of music in the most thorough manner.

The levers seen in the accompanying cut, also the pedals and aperture for the music roll, are entirely covered when the playing device is not in use.

We have a full line of these player pianos in stock; also other makes of combination pianos, including the Knabe Angelus, the highest class instrument made as a player piano. Call and investigate our line, or write for circulars. We will be glad to furnish them to you free of charge.

Management of the Relief Funds.

The managers of the San Francisco relief funds have once more been brought conspicuously into the limelight through a controversy with the Park Commissioners over the continued occupation of the public parks by refugees until the middle of next August. The Relief Corporation has been planning to occupy these pleasure areas with villages of refuge composed of over 6000 small, slightly built two and three-room cottages, costing $100 and $150 each, to be rented to homeless refugees at $4 and $6 per month. The Park Commissioners evidently foresaw that the toleration of these plans would be apt to breed future trouble and indefinite delay in the removal of the refuge camps. The retention of the latter in any form continues the alienation of the public parks from the legitimate purposes of their dedication which does not include the domiciling of those who are, rightfully or wrongfully, dependent upon public charity for their maintenance. This condition was created, of course, by necessity growing out of a great public calamity, and was temporarily tolerable under the general principle that necessity knows no law. Moreover, the Relief Corporation was proceeding with the erection of these villages of refuge as if it controlled the public parks and was clothed with superior authority. The jurisdiction of the Park Commissioners was ignored, and they were not consulted in the matter of the location of the proposed villages by the corporation managers. This was, apparently, the feather which broke the camel's back.

The Park Commissioners rightly resented the corporation's usurpation of authority over the parks by promptly passing a resolution providing for the removal of tents and other inflammable buildings from all of them, save eight specifically named, within thirty days, and their restoration thereafter to the public uses to which they have been dedicated. The resolution was unanimously adopted. But the arrogant and dictatorial attitude of the managers of the Relief Corporation present at the meeting of the commission roused the ire of the commissioners, particularly of Commissioner W. J. Dingee, who mercilessly excoriated the Relief Corporation.

Mr. Dingee is not a man to speak inconsiderately. Whatever he has to say on any subject is well weighed and well backed before it is said. The views he uttered on the social and mental caliber of one or more of the Relief Corporation managers is a matter of secondary consequence; but what he had to say about the management of the relief fund from the day of its creation to date is a matter of public importance. He said: "No more houses are needed for the refugees. The Relief Corporation will not find tenants among the refugees for the houses already constructed. I admit that I was fool enough to give $5000 to the relief fund. This money and $6,000,000 more given for relief might as well be in the bottom of the bay."

Mr. Dingee's arraignment of the management of the relief funds was fierce; but, when we consider the man who made it, every one who knows him will concede that it would have remained unspoken if it had not been in the main just. The unfortunate thing about the San Francisco relief fund is that its disposition was placed in the hands of men who had axes to grind. As a result, the system of distribution, the supervision over supplies and the plans adopted from time to time for the final disposition of the bulk of the money contributed by a generous nation for the relief of the distressed, have been sources of scandal. Under the pressure of public criticism costly commissions organized for the benefit of favored politicians and the employment of a long list of political retainers in subordinate positions at the expense of the fund, have been abolished and dismissed, and plans for the creation of an organization which would displace the savings banks and the building and loan societies in the work of restoring the burned district, and perpetuate the control by a few of many millions of dollars contributed for charity, have had to be abandoned. The Relief Corporation was, in fact, created for the purpose of relieving the original committee from the odium and responsibility of the offenses committed under its lax management and the wholesale graft for which it was apparently responsible. But the corporation is controlled by the more active members of the committee which it succeeded, and they do not seem to have mended their ways. Cognizance of the corporation's methods has been taken in the East, where several millions of relief money is being held with a strong mental reservation. The Red Cross at Washington, which holds over $2,000,000, and the Massachusetts Chambers of Commerce, which have control of several hundred thousands of dollars contributed for the relief of distressed business men in San Francisco, have positively refused to release any of the funds in their hands, except under specially defined conditions regarding their distribution, notwithstanding the intercession of a commissioner expressly dispatched to the East by the Relief Corporation to secure its transmission without the attachment of any conditions regarding the disposition of the money.

But the main feature in Mr. Dingee's arraignment of the corporation and the relief camps located in the parks is that the latter have become morally a stench in the nostrils of the community; that the great majority of their inhabitants are too indolent to work; that drunkenness and immorality are rife in them and have called forth the strongest protests from the residents of the territory adjacent to the parks; that after the truly worthy among the refugees abandoned the camp and shifted for themselves, the corporation has allowed the outcasts of the country, who have no claim upon the relief fund, to take their places. These have found that the camps afford them means of living without labor, and they are imposing upon a great national charity, which Mr. Dingee and every other well-wisher of an honest disposition of the relief funds wants to see stopped. And it should be stopped; and in the name of decency and humanity the refuge camps should be abolished.

The Carrying of Arms.

Crime is rampant on both sides of the bay, and the police in all of the communities bordering upon it are temporarily paralyzed in their efforts to suppress it by the boldness of the criminals and their total disregard for human life in carrying out their nefarious operations. In San Francisco the conditions are worse than they are here. They are, of course, abnormal in both cities, as they are in all neighboring communities. The dislocation of business and the unsettled state of society and affairs generally which followed the conflagration in San Francisco made it an inviting field to the worst and boldest crooks in the country, who flocked to it to reap a harvest. In Oakland, the sudden influx of a large population was naturally accompanied by a corresponding increase in the criminal element. In both communities the labors and the responsibilities of their respective police departments have increased enormously, as a direct result. The inability of the San Francisco police to cope with the situation has been attributed by the municipal authorities in a large measure to departmental inefficiency, and it has resulted in a general shaking-up of the force.

No such complaint can be fairly lodged against the police force in this city. But the extraordinary conditions which exist here call for the adoption of extraordinary measures to aid the department in its efforts to protect life and property and to expel or exterminate the gang of criminals who have found a temporary lodgment in our midst. These conditions resemble, in some respects, those which existed in San Francisco during the hoodlum riots, only the lawless characters figuring in those disorders resorted to arson as well as robbery and murder, and directed their operations chiefly against the members of a particular race. They were suppressed effectively, however, by the enrollment and arming of over six thousand citizens who aided the regularly constituted police force to patrol the city.

The right to carry arms is a constitutional right for which the revolutionary fathers bled and died. But it has been correctly construed that this constitutional right does not imply the privilege of carrying weapons concealed on the person. Communities have found it necessary to adopt ordinances prohibiting the carrying of concealed weapons, excepting where permits are issued under special conditions. It is only the criminal element that willfully violates these local laws. The class of criminals now infesting the bay cities is invariably armed and, in some instances, the weapons carried have been used with deadly effect against defenseless citizens.

The concealed weapon ordinance in force in this city exacts a fee of $2.50 in the form of a deposit, on every citizen to whom a permit to carry arms is issued, although his standing for peace and good order is vouched for by two of his fellow townsmen. This is really a tax imposed on the law-abiding citizen for giving him the right to defend himself and his personal property on equal terms against the thugs who may hold him up on the highways after night-fall. The conditions are such now that the imposition of this tax should be relaxed in the case of every citizen who can give a good account of himself and is duly vouched for by any two well known and responsible residents. Present conditions require the adoption of extraordinary measures, and under the conditions now existing here it seems necessary that one of the extraordinary measures which should be adopted is the issuance of permits to carry weapons to all law-abiding citizens as an aid to put an end to the carnival of crime. Footpads will hesitate to attack peaceable citizens when they realize that they are liable to be summarily disposed of themselves.

Since the Buffalo convention not even David B. Hill has been heard to declare himself a Democrat.

Amid the Democratic hurly-burly nobody has thought to inquire about Grover Cleveland. Has the Sage of Princeton been lost in the shuffle?

Hearst's political sagacity may be doubted, but not his courage. His unequivocal repudiation of Murphy may be taken as Pickwickian by the sceptical, but there is not the faintest room for doubt about what he said of Pat McCarran, the Brooklyn boss. He broadly declared McCarran to be corrupt and defied him to do his worst. McCarran had written Hearst a letter to the effect that if he put an Independence League ticket in Kings county he would lose the county by 75,000 majority. An Independence League ticket will be put in the field. This may not be politics, but it is magnificent as a display of moral courage.

Why Don't You Make Money?

During the past few months there has been a number of chances to make money in the stock market, and there are going to be just as many opportunities in the near future.

I look for a slight reaction in some of the active stocks, but eventually this market is going to sell a great deal higher.

For the past three weeks I have had one of the best mining authorities in Nevada making a tour of inspection and investigation through Manhattan, Tonopah, Goldfield, Bullfrog and other mining sections. His reports will soon be coming in and then I will have something interesting for you. Have you ever noticed how little the average broker knows about the stocks he is dealing in? He simply takes your money regardless of consequences, just make a little commission. I want my client to make money.

I have called your attention to a stock which advanced from 25 to 50 cents in which I am sure will go way above a dollar, and possibly above two dollars by January 1. This mine is already in $70.00, and the stock is liable to be withdrawn from the market at any time. If you want to share in the profits with us you had better get in right away.

I also mention a stock selling at 15 cents that will soon go to 30 or 40. This is the last time I can call your attention to this for I am positive that this stock will be 25 cents a share and perhaps 30, before October 15. I can heartily recommend this stock as being a good safe investment.

BOXING THE EARS.

A reprehensible practice not unknown to cross and worried mothers is the ready punishment of their children's ears, all ignorant of the danger of such a habit. There are several obvious things fraught with danger to the ear, such as picking with a pin, but people don't think of having the matter explained—say a blow on the side of the head is such a bad thing. The reason why children's ears should not be boxed is that the passage of the ear is closed by a thin membrane, especially adapted so that it is insulated by every impulse of air, and with nothing but the air to support it internally. What, then, can be more likely to injure this membrane than a sudden and forcible compression of the air in front of it? If any one designed to overstretch or break the membrane he could scarcely devise a more efficient means than bringing the hand suddenly down upon the passage of the ear, thus driving the air violently before it with no possibility for its escape, but by the membrane giving way. Many children are made deaf in this way.—From Woman's Life.

BEYOND HIM.

In the staging of one of his earlier plays Joseph Jefferson, accompanied by a friend, attended a rehearsal at which a lively disagreement arose between two of the actresses as to the possession of the center of the stage during a certain scene. While the manager poured oil upon the troubled waters Jefferson sat carelessly swiveling his face from the rail of an adjoining box. The friend could stand it no longer. "Good Lord, Jefferson," he exclaimed, "this will ruin your play. Why don't you settle matters? You could, if you only would!" Jefferson shook his head gravely, but with a twinkle in his eye. "No, George," he replied; "the Lord only made one man who could ever manage the sun and moon, and you remember even he let the stars alone."—Harper's Weekly.

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE IS MOST UNPOPULAR WITH GERMAN MASSES

Mingles Freely With the Common People and Gives Free Rides in His Automobile.

By MALCOLM CLARKE

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by the Hearst News Service over longest leased wire in the world.)

BERLIN Oct 6.—By democratic and unpopularity the crown prince is making himself popular with the German masses.

Following the German maneuvers he went about freely among the people, mingling with them in the most intimate way.

He talked in public to small boys that crowded around him in the streets and gave a free ride to an urchin who could show him the way to his mother's quarters.

During a horse-riding party in the park he was seen to give a ride to a man who was a member of the lower classes.

Count Walewski was at one time engaged to an American widow, but the engagement was broken off. He has frequently been caught obtaining goods under false pretenses and indulging in other frauds.

The brother of Maria Spiridonova, the Russian revolutionary, is a member of the Russian revolutionaries and is a member of the Russian revolutionaries.

The Roumanian authorities have expelled him from Jassy where he was living as a refugee from Russian persecution. He was sent to the Russian frontier.

When Maria Spiridonova removed the vice-governor of Tula her brother-in-law, Prince Dmitri, became the subject of the Russian police who were informed by Russian agents. A big dose of the Russian police was put on him.

He was also given to the Russian police. He was also given to the Russian police.

Count Walewski has just been condemned to five months' imprisonment on a charge of fraud.

The count was at one time well known in America having returned from there in 1901 after trying his luck as a horse dealer.

He was not successful in it, however, and as he had had a good musical education he gave piano and singing lessons and also sang in concert.

CURE OF AMERICAN WOMAN ASTONISHES HER ROYAL FRIENDS

Lady Bateman Long An Invalid, Entering Actively Into All Her Husband's Extensive Interests.

By PAUL LAMBETH

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by the Hearst News Service over longest leased wire in the world.)

LONDON Oct 6.—Lady Bateman (Mrs Knapp of New York) who has just returned from a cure at Contraxville has astonished her American friends of late by her energy and her active interest in sport.

From being a highly strung nervous and rather delicate woman she now enters thoroughly into all her husband's interests and takes the keenest interest in his shooting parties.

After a brief visit to New York, Lady Bateman will settle down at the family place, Shobdon Court, entering a series of large pheasant shooting parties.

She has become an expert in providing just the right sort of shooting luncheons for the men, and herself keeps the same book.

She is in fact another wonderful instance of the adaptability of the American woman to her surroundings.

Her husband, Lord Bateman, is an Egyptian restaurant and makes a specialty of a hard dish made from corned milk known as "yoghurt," which is strongly recommended as a cure for dyspepsia.

A number of Americans tired of the ludicrous so-called American dishes served by enterprising London hotel-keepers have discovered and so boomed this little place.

The Maryland chickens, the corn on the cob and the lobster a la Newburgh served at the average London restaurant made the American visitor very angry, and so he has turned to something better than which sets his digestion and tickles his faded palate.

Mrs. Mercer Pell of New York, who has made an immense success as a manager of the Grand hotel Harrogate has left for New York in order to finally disengage her matrimonial affairs.

Her husband, Lord Harrogate, is making the trip to New York in an English school but his whereabouts is kept a secret for the present.

Mrs. Pell managed to get all the smart Americans and English people to her hotel while the season lasted at Harrogate but a manager must expect some things and Mrs. Pell had a very disagreeable one.

One day a terrible crash was heard in the dining room followed by many more. Mrs. Pell was sitting at the table when the water running amok and smashing every article of crockery he could lay his hands on.

The man had been very impertinent and Mrs. Pell had rebuked him and this was his form of revenge. Two English guests came to Mrs. Pell's rescue, as well as a policeman who was passing by.

The man was taken into custody and Mrs. Pell went on with her business as if nothing had happened.

CUPID INVADERS BIG BUSINESS HOUSES

OFFICE FORCES SERIOUSLY DEPLETED BY FALL WEDDINGS.

Cafe Man Who Offered $100 to Each Clerk Who Married, Nearly Bankrupt.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—There have been several epidemics of matrimony in evidence in the metropolis of late which go to show that Cupid is no respecter of business. A short time ago one of the big insurance companies, which employs scores of stenographers, announced that its office force was being seriously depleted from the fact that all the stenographers were getting married to the young men of the office staff. Soon after the public school term began it was discovered that seventy-four of the city's women teachers had married during the vacation. Practically all of these came back to work. A by-law of the board of education forbids any woman teacher to marry under penalty of losing her job, but the court of appeals has sided with Cupid and declared the by-law null and void. In the third and last instance of the matrimonial epidemic the course of true love runs more smoothly. One year ago the manager of one of the most popular French restaurants and cafes on Broadway announced that he would give $100 to each of his employees who married, and $50 for each subsequent visit of the work. Since making the offer he has had to hire a special bookkeeper to keep account of vital statistics. Up to October 1 he has paid out $5000, of which $3900 went for marriages and the rest represented the mystical number of twenty-three babies. There is no race suicide in that particular Broadway cafe.

CHILDREN MAY HAVE MONEY

They Rumaged Effects of Woman Who Died Leaving a Considerable Sum.

Did children in the neighborhood of the Rose street school in Berkeley take the money of Mrs. Henrietta Katchinski, who was killed several days ago at Sixteenth street station by being struck by the West Berkeley local? This is the question being asked by her relatives, who are endeavoring to locate the money which the deceased woman is thought to have left.

The aged woman lived in the basement of the school and it is said that her effects were rummaged by children who reside in the neighborhood. Whether they obtained any money is not known. But a short time prior to her death, Mrs. Katchinski inherited $1500, so her brother, E. Paasch of West Berkeley asserts. What she did with the money cannot be ascertained. The public administrator took charge of the deceased's effects, which had been left in her quarters in the Rose street school. It was found that the place had been rummaged; it is believed by children in the neighborhood, who were known to constantly harass the aged woman.

Inquiry has been made at the Berkeley banks as to whether Mrs. Katchinski had deposited her money, but no record was found. The woman went under several aliases and may have deposited the amount under a false name.

DRAW TIGHT, NOT LOOSEN, LAWS OF DIVORCE

CORRESPONDENT FAVORS A BROADER VIEW OF SUBJECT.

Separation Should be Granted Only for Serious Offenses.

EDITOR TRIBUNE: Let the woman who thinks the priests are making too tight the divorce law ponder for a moment and ask this question:

"Is personal happiness the one thing to be sought for, and if so, how would conditions be bettered?"

To improve "the world," we must work in thought, and the outer or the unfolding will be the expression of that thought. If that thought is not centered on personal happiness dependent on material surroundings, but on good that is in all and governs all, her outlook will be clear and calm, bringing love and patience in abundance. And should the mate fail in some things, her broad and clear thought will see in those failures not death to the love her heart feels, but a new strength to help him overcome. "Where love is, much is forgiven."

The question every girl should ask herself before entering into this most sacred relationship is, "What can this man be to me?" not "What can this man give me?" Then there would be permanent, full and perfect blessings instead of heart-burnings, and a knowledge born of mind, not born of painful experiences.

Only for grave offenses should divorces be granted, and especially so where children are to be considered.

I am not in sympathy with Mrs. C's personal standpoint, but with the priest who considers the good of the many.

INA SHEPHERD.

PRIVATE HOUSES SOON WILL BE UNKNOWN

MANHATTAN ISLAND IS ALL FLATS AND TENEMENTS.

Sixty Millions Has Been Invested in Such Structures Since January 1.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Probably the time will come when the private house is a rarity on Manhattan island, and all these hardy individuals, who still dare and can afford to live in what was originally New York City, will dwell in flats and tenements. The present rate at which apartment houses are building in the city would seem to justify this conclusion. Since January 1 plans have been filed for the erection of about 1000 apartment and flat houses in Manhattan at an estimated cost of $60,000,000. These structures range all the way from the five-story flat-house without an elevator, with suites of from two to four box-like rooms, to the apartment palaces on Riverside drive, with private garage and yacht landing attached, where all the latest mechanical devices are utilized to reduce householding cares to a minimum and insure the highest physical comfort. Some of these apartments rent as high as $10,000. Housekeeping in a flat is a distinctive feature of New York life. It is undoubtedly cozy, but the confirmed flat-dweller loses the idea of "home." This is because the flat-dweller is nomadic. The family that has dwelt in the same apartments for a decade would be hard to find. And there are hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers who change their "homes" every year.

MATRIMONY AND THE SCHOOL-MAID

Though the young schoolmarm who merrily are often among the best and most promising teachers of the schools, the superintendents are wise not to regard them. In the whole list of women's rights, matrimony is the one most absolutely alienable. Any infringement thereof is sure to provoke rebellion, stubborn and implacable. It would be easier to rein the services of specially desirable young teachers by pretending to try to force them into marriages than by opposing them. Let the young schoolmarm marry just as soon as they are sure they have found the right partner. The normal schools will make new teachers, but takes a marriage to make a family, and without the family there would be no need for the teachers.—St. Louis Republic.

IT BEATS

all my guessing how many reformers there are who never go to the polls, where they are really wanted. Suppose Mr. Carnegie and Mark Twain and Grandfather Mathews, of Idaho, come, get into a voting booth about once in eight years, and I have no doubt they vote according to the dictates of their consciences, but if they ever go to the primaries? Do they ever get out and work? I guess not. If they would do that, they could accomplish more real good in the line of reform than by trying to reform the English language. Whenever I get excited I drop in to Chas. Hardie and hit up a cup of his Dutch cocoa. I'm going there now.

DR. HILLIS SAYS THAT IN 50 YEARS SHE WILL KNOW MORE.

Sterner Sex Must Quit Whisky, Gambling and the Race Track.

A reader of THE TRIBUNE woman's page has sent the following for publication, the article having appeared in a New York paper: "In a sermon on 'Women,' Rev. N. D. Hillis has sounded a warning note to young men in business life. 'If you don't want women to outstrip you in the industrial race,' he said, 'and compel you to come to them when you want fifty cents, you would better stop drinking poor whisky and quit gambling at the race tracks and pool rooms.' 'Women,' continued Dr. Hillis, 'in spite of man's refusal to give them the rights and privileges to which they are entitled, are today in 145 branches of business, and in instances showing more ability than the men.' 'In one of the greatest financial institutions of this city not long ago, a well-known man, drawing a salary of $25,000 a year, suffered a nervous collapse. The directors selected the young woman who for ten years had been his stenographer. She, the directors told me, has done better work than the man she succeeded, and is doing it for but $10,000 a year.' 'In fifty years the women will know more than the men. They have more time to read and study, and they are improving their time. Eventually they will vote and tell the men for whom they shall vote. Eventually all the universities will be co-educational, and the women will carry off all the prizes.'"

WOMAN WHO CLAIMS INCUBATOR BABY WILL CONTINUE HER FIGHT

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 6.—The "Incubator Baby" case was up in the Supreme Court today when a writ of mandamus was allowed by the court to compel Charles A. Smart, District Judge in Lawrence, to let a motion for a new trial, which has been asked for by Charlotte E. Bleakley, who asserts to be mother of the "Incubator Baby" which was in an incubator at the St. Louis fair.

The baby has been adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Barclay, in Rock Island, Ill.

Mrs. Bleakley obtained possession of the baby, left Illinois and went to Lawrence, where habeas corpus proceedings were instituted by the Barclays to obtain possession of the child. The court adjudged that the Barclays have the child, and decreed that Mrs. Bleakley was not the mother. Mrs. Bleakley then asked for a stay of execution, which was refused, and then asked for a new trial. Before this was taken up she disappeared from the State with the child and has since been out of the State. She has been held in contempt by Judge

Stuart, and when she again tried to prosecute a motion for a new trial this was refused by Judge Smart on the ground that Mrs. Bleakley was in contempt. When she made the second request for a new trial she offered to purge herself of contempt, but this was denied. Judge Smart refused to entertain the motion for rehearing of the case, and the mandamus proceedings were brought to compel him to do so. The opinion was written by Judge Porter, who held that Mrs. Bleakley should have a new trial.

BAD FIRE WAS SOON SUBDUED

Good Work by Department Saves Conflagration in Business Center.

LIVERMORE, Oct. 6.—Fire broke out last Thursday about 1 p. m. in a small lean-to back of N. J. Fletcher's bicycle shop in the Ferguson building on First street, in the middle of one of the principal business blocks of the town, and although a strong north wind was blowing at the time the blaze was extinguished before adjacent buildings could catch fire, having been luckily discovered before it had gained much headway. The damage was slight.

A tax levy for the coming year has been fixed by the Board of Town Trustees at 75 cents on the $100 valuation as follows: General fund, sixty-five cents; library fund, ten cents.

J. A. Mangas and Chas. Sissen returned Friday from a trip of several weeks through the northern part of the State. While in Modoc county they purchased a carload of carload of horses.

COMPANY 1, TO DANCE.

Company 1 will give a dance at Sweeney Opera House next Tuesday evening, to which the company members and ex-members and their friends and relatives are invited. There will be no admission fee.

J. O. McKown leaves Sunday for Los Angeles to attend a meeting of the Board of Pharmacy and expects to be absent three weeks.

Mrs. J. J. H. and daughter, Gladys, have returned from a three weeks' visit with her daughter, Mrs. A. V. Dronin, at Rio Vista.

MARRIED IN CHURCH.

Francis M. McCormick and Miss Anson W. Nevin were married at St. Michael's Church at 11 a. m. Wednesday by Rev. P. Power, with Miss Ida Nevin as bridesmaid and Wm. McCormick as best man. They left on the 3:32 train for a wedding trip, and upon their return the popular young couple will reside in the groom's cottage on East Second street.

Thos. Croak had one eye badly burnt Tuesday morning by some sheep dip squirting up into it from a hole in a can by the pressure on the side of the can as he punched a second hole to let in air. The eye is badly inflamed, but the sight of it can probably be saved.

A big field fire which started Sunday morning burned over several thousand acres on the Fredericks and Sullivan ranch and vicinity southwest of town before it was finally checked Tuesday.

Robt. McDonald was thrown from his wagon last Saturday while driving out to the Meyn sale, as a result of his team becoming frightened at an automobile and running off the grade. Just beyond the cemetery hill. He suffered bad strains and bruises in consequence.

An ornamental iron gate has been erected at the fire-house entrance. An escaped lunatic, a big strapping man who was formerly an inmate of Agnew's Asylum but got away when the earthquake destroyed the place, was encountered by Chas. Ginger Monday night in front of his gate, where he was standing with the dogs barking at him, and with a big club in his hand, and it was only tact and a clever ruse that kept the insane man from striking him with the club. He was evidently a religious maniac, and a drunk of liquor which had been given him at a saloon in town had made him violent. He was finally taken away by a fellow workman at a vineyard near by, where he has been employed.

George Beck returned Monday morning from his Eastern trip of three weeks as delegate to the Supreme Grove of Druids in New York City, and reports the heat so oppressive there that he and the rest of the party were glad to get away and return to California. Minick, old-time residents of this place, have sold their home place on L street, six blocks north of the depot, with lot 50x150, to George Frost, and the aged couple will take their departure in a couple of weeks, as soon as they can dispose of the rest of their business here, for the Old Fellows' Home at Thermalito, Butte county, where they will reside in future.

Mrs. Charles Ginger is visiting friends in San Francisco.

DRIVING OUT CRIMINALS

Police and Mayor Frighten Bad Men Into Leaving Oakland.

Chief of Police Wilson now believes that he can ably cope with the situation which has been confronting him since the earthquake, which resulted in a large increase in the population of this city and brought an undesirable element here. It has been noticed, however, that many of these suspicious characters have been leaving the city since Chief Wilson and Mayor Mott, president of the Police Commissioners, announced that drastic measures would be resorted to to drive the undesirable element from this city.

FIGHT CAUSES PANIC ON SHIP

Vicious Swing of Brass Box by Aggressor Frightens Ferry Passengers.

What might have been a serious panic on board the Key route boat which left San Francisco at 6:20 o'clock last night was averted by the prompt interference of the police officer when W. Egan, a surveyor's assistant, started a fight with one of his companions. Owing to the crowded condition of the deck Henry Hahn, a seaman living at 613 Forty-eighth street, an innocent bystander, was struck over the right eye by a brass compass box in the hands of the aggressor, Egan, who soon had a clear field.

When the blood spurted from Hahn's head the women on the boat grew hysterical and begged the men near to the infuriated man to overpower him. None would approach him, however, until the officer broke his way through the crowd and placed the man under arrest.

Hahn was taken to the Receiving hospital by a friend and his wound was stitched by Warren J. M. Page, but no trace can be found of Egan at any of the falls in this vicinity, although the officer gave Hahn his prisoner's name and told him to prosecute.

FIGHT CAUSES PANIC ON SHIP

Vicious Swing of Brass Box by Aggressor Frightens Ferry Passengers.

What might have been a serious panic on board the Key route boat which left San Francisco at 6:20 o'clock last night was averted by the prompt interference of the police officer when W. Egan, a surveyor's assistant, started a fight with one of his companions. Owing to the crowded condition of the deck Henry Hahn, a teamster living at 613 Forty-eighth street, an innocent bystander, was struck over the right eye by a brass compass box in the hands of the aggressor, Egan, who soon had a clear field.

When the blood spurted from Hahn's head the women on the boat grew hysterical and begged the men near to the infuriated man to overpower him. None would approach him, however, until the officer broke his way through the crowd and placed the man under arrest.

Hahn was taken to the Receiving hospital by a friend and his wound was stitched by Warden J. M. Page, but no trace can be found of Egan at any of the jails in this vicinity, although the officer gave Hahn his prisoner's name and told him to prosecute.

OAKLAND TO BE FULL SUB-PORT

Increase in Business Demands Regular Force of Clerks and Weighers.

Oakland is to be made a full sub-port of entry, and will be fully equipped to handle the large amount of imported business which has come to this side of the bay. This will soon go into effect, as orders have already been issued by Assistant Secretary of War Henry James B. Reynolds, on the recommendation of the collector of the port, F. S. Stratton. The office has been conducted temporarily in this city in the postoffice building for the last year and a half. Deputy Collector of the port has been ordered that the office will now have a full force of clerks, measurers, weighers and other assistants, about fifteen in all. Last month the amount of duties collected in this city amounted to $3,834, and the handling of the business has been extremely difficult on account of the necessity of bringing extra help from San Francisco.

CAN JOE MITCHELL MAKE "IRON-MAN" DUNN GIVE GROUND?

JOE MITCHELL.

The interest in the Joe Mitchell-"Iron Man" Charlie Dunn contest, to take place at the Bellanca Club next Tuesday night, is gaining every day, and by the time the contestants enter the ring there will be considerable money bet on each man's chances.

Dunn is one of the most popular fighters in San Francisco and his name on the bills on that side of the bay means a packed house.

He has absolutely no fear of an opponent, no matter how tough he may be, and it is from the fact that he never backs up that he has gained so much favor with the fans.

Mitchell, however, believes that he will either make Dunn step back or knock him out.

The betting on the result is at even money, but just who will be the favorite

THE ROCK UPON WHICH JACK O'BRIEN AND SAM BERGER SPLIT

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6.—The chances of getting Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and California Sam Berger together are not improving as the days roll by. A matter of ring etiquette was the rock they split on.

O'Brien believes in dropping his arms and stepping back in courtly fashion whenever there is a semblance of a clinch. Berger thinks that as long as a fighter has one arm free of entanglements he should be allowed to whale away at the other fellow.

Neither of the heavies would budge an inch and Promoter Coffroth was compelled to abandon his scheme of bringing the men together Thanksgiving Day in the green fields of Colma.

"Be sure you are right; then go ahead." That's my motto," said Berger while justifying his stubbornness in holding out for a "straight Queensberry" fight.

"Similar sentiments possess and similar motives actuate Mr. O'Brien," said dignified John Cribbins, who represents Philadelphia Jack while the latter is "looking over the ground" around Los Angeles.

Now with all respect to the historical character who sprung the be-sure-you-are-right maxim, I think it is a little too unbending. As an aid to progress I consider "canvass the situation thoroughly and take a chance occasion" a much wiser saw.

If all the conquerors, world-builders, inventors and discoverers had waited until they were sure they were right, they should still be wearing skins and chasing our meals with stone hatchets.

It seems to me that O'Brien and Berger are careful to a fault. Berger says he had all he wants of refined fistfights when he hooked up with Billy Rodenbach of New York in his amateur days. He was pecked and plained and before he could shake himself free enough to get in one retaliatory punch the thing was over and he was adjudged loser.

He seems to think that O'Brien might hit and grab and cling through forty-five rounds the way Rodenbach did through four. O'Brien seems afraid that Berger, with his extra strength and extra weight would rough him to such an extent in the fight-yourself-loose style of milling that the bout would resemble a barroom brawl rather than an up-to-date exposition of the technique of the Queensberry game.

As a rule deadlocks of this kind are broken by one of the men saying "all right, we will go it your way," but in the present case each fellow is so sure he is right that the match isn't going ahead worth a cent.

When the Colma affair fell through Cribbins signed an agreement conceding to Eddie Graney the right to match O'Brien against the most available heavyweight for a contest in San Francisco during the month of November.

The distinction conferred upon the little horseherd has made him as proud as a peacock with two tails, and he is doing some deep thinking before selecting an opponent for O'Brien. No doubt Graney would rather do business with Berger than any of the other unemployed big fellows, but it is doubtful if he can secure the stalwart San Franciscan. Graney was referee of the Berger-Rodenbach bout, the affair in which Sam declares he was handcuffed and shackled after being taken into the ring blindfolded, and there hasn't been the kindest feeling between Sam and Graney since.

Kaufmann, Jack Johnson and Tommy Burns have been mentioned as eligible for the November match with O'Brien, but it is no trick to reduce this list. Kaufmann had one try with Jack at this end, and did so poorly that it would hardly be deemed advisable to re-match them yet a while. O'Brien, they say, does not take kindly to the idea of boxing Johnson, and a goodly number of San Francisco's sporting men believe Tommy Burns hasn't any notion of taking a chance in a straightaway match with O'Brien. At that Graney thinks he can sign Burns with O'Brien if a more suitable man does not happen along.

Jim Jeffries is back on his alfalfa patch, and the hand that guides the plow won't rock the aspiring heavyweights to sleep yet a while. And across the bay in Oakland, Billy Delaney, the Napoleon of trainers and handlers, is sulking in his tent. "Delaney hasn't given up hope of yanking Jeffries forth from his retirement, however. He believes the big fellow is just itching to sniff crunched resin and listen to the smash of the starting bell, and that it is only a question of time when Jeff will be in the lists again.

Although the announcement of Jeffries' return to the ring was but the story of a day and was denied promptly the next, it served to show that Jeff's is still a name to conjure with. While the interest caused by the report lasted, the other heavies seemed to dwindle to the dimensions of plumes and all talk of an O'Brien-Berger match and other matches died to a whisper.

Jimmy Britt has great hopes of inducing Battling Nelson to sign up for a fight in San Francisco in December. He believes that a third contest between the Dane and himself would draw bigger than any other pugilistic card at the present time in sight, not even excepting another Gans-Nelson match.

So as to be half-way prepared if Nelson should agree to meet him, Jimmy has begun preparatory training at San Rafael. He is now about six pounds above the lightweight scale and has lost the slightly rotund appearance he acquired through months of ease and inactivity. So far nothing definite has been heard from Nolan or Nelson in regard to a match with Britt, but Jimmy is not all depressed by the Dane's silence and neglect.

"He is still fuming and fretting about the Gans affair but his vision will clear pretty soon," said Britt. "When it does, I won't have to beg for a match. Nelson is in the business for the money he can make and he will soon discover that a Britt-Nelson go will mean a bigger gate than he can get by fighting anyone else."

Dick Hyland, who defeated Eddie Hanlon, has been placed on the list of desirable attractions by all the fight promoters. Roche of Colma, it is understood, will handle Hyland's next contest. Hyland's opponent will be Cyclopedia Thompson.

Hyland's style is serviceable rather than brilliant. He is a cobby fellow with great strength and hitting power, his shoulder muscles giving him a hump-backed appearance when he sets himself for action. He uses a right hand body punch which is very telling. Some of the experts call it a kidney punch, but from the manner in which it red-dened Hanlon's left side from armpit to hip it might just as reasonably have been called a lung smash.

BOXERS, SHUN WINE AND WOMEN; INDULGE IN SONG, IF YOU WISH

By FRANKIE NEIL.

A fighter's stock in trade is mainly his physical condition. Take that away from him and no matter how clever or game he may be, sooner or later he is bound to meet defeat. How many examples do we meet day after day of people who were ruined in the zenith of their careers through having listened to the dulcet tones of flattery or succumbed to the enticing pleasure of the flowing bowl—men and women who once were physically perfect—reduced to mere frames, due to the deadly effects of drink and its consequent vices?

A successful fighter—that is, a champion of his class—has always to be constantly on his guard, lest in a weak moment he give way to the countless pleasures that perforce surround him; for he is a hero of sport, and sport is composed of elements that are purely physical. Of people who live for pleasure and for whom the glare of the electric light is the essence of existence.

WOMEN ENTICE HIM.
The women will vie with one another in their efforts to entice him with their various charms—not so much for his good looks, for a champion fighter's face is generally battered out of shape—but for the consequent notoriety of having captured a champion's heart.

Men will insist on having a cold bottle with him—just to celebrate his latest victory. Needless to assert that if in a weak moment, he should acquiesce in the first bottle leads to a second, the second to a third, and so on, until a sufficient number are consumed to properly fit one for a fling "along the line," and the fighter's physical constitution suffers in the end.

The human anatomy can safely and properly assimilate a just quantity of alcohol—to be more exact, about four ounces—anything over that destroys the tissues and weakens the system. Therefore, every glass of alcoholic beverage that a fighter indulges in, over and above a reasonable and just quantity, is injurious to him. The effects might not show at once, but the reaction is sure to come—sure as night verges into day—for he is fighting nature then and nature is the champion of all classes.

Think, therefore, what a struggle a champion fighter has to continually carry on against himself. He is but human. He, too, would like to indulge in the various pleasures that constantly surround him, but if he is wise he will not. For at the moment that a fighter loses control of his will and gives way to the temptations that envelop him, from that moment the star of his glory has begun to set.

These are not mere idle words. Facts speak for themselves. All I ask is for the sportsmen and scoffers of these views of mine to cast a glance back over the history of fistiana. There they will see ample limits and fought off temptations lusted longer than he who gave vent to his baser inclinations.

HONOLULU IS TO TRY FOR LEAGUE

President Eugene Bert announced yesterday afternoon that he had received requests from San Diego and Honolulu for membership in the Pacific Coast league.

L. W. Wolf of the A. G. Spaulding sporting goods house at Honolulu has informed the president that Honolulu has raised $25,000 and while they do not have active membership, they are proposed for the four teams to come down and play the local team series of games.

The Pacific Coast league of baseball, managers of San Diego, are at the head of the scheme in the southern city and claim that they will raise $25,000 to support a team from Honolulu.

played great form but was thrown out of the ring because he was a little slow for the times in his class.

He has now dispelled the idea among the crowd that he can keep up his winning gait at his present rate. He will soon bound into popularity as a champion of the ring, and every inch a gentleman in either the ring or out of the ring and it is to be hoped that he will prove superior to any he has a credit to name.

Great credit is due Harry Foley for the manner in which Thom's has come out on the front as he has used the opportunity along with every one else to get in front of the crowd and to give the weight class who has a chance to be that demon Walcott.

CONSULT WITH THE PRESIDENT

Root and Magoon Assemble at White House to Discuss Cuban Situation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Secretary Root and Governor Magoon were in conference with the President at the White House yesterday for some time, the purpose being to instruct the Governor relative to his treatment of the Cuban question when he assumed office at Havana. General Bell, chief of staff, who is leaving Washington this afternoon with Governor Magoon for Havana by way of Tampa, also called on the President.

It is now stated that there is no present intention of departing from the program originally outlined for the dispatch of troops for Cuba and within a few hours it is expected that some of the troop ships will be leaving New York for Havana. Whether or not other detachments in addition to those originally ordered to Cuba will be sent, it is now declared, will depend entirely upon Secretary Taft's report upon conditions there.

"Addresses were made by prominent merchants and labor leaders expressing their appreciation of his fair treatment and earnest work in behalf of industrial peace in the past, he having exerted every influence in the interest of harmony and by so doing prevented loss to employer and employee alike.

"The committee which at present consists of close to one hundred electors will meet every Friday evening at Central Council building, southwest corner Eighth and Broadway, all who are interested in good government are invited to attend and become part of the committee."

WILL PROTECT CAB PATRONS

Device to be Used in New York Tells Miles Traveled and Amount of Fare.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—New York is to experience a complete transformation of its cab service within the next six weeks. One hundred automobile devices equipped with an ingenious device which registers automatically and in full view of the passenger, the number of miles traveled, and the amount due, for time and distance, will be placed in operation and will be the vanguard of an army of revolution which is to extend to every city in the United States. Not only will the patron be protected against imposition, but the cab company itself will have a registration of every cent collected and every mile traveled. The Taximeter is the name given to the device, which is a German invention.

POLICE FIND A MISSING YOUTH

BERKELEY, Oct. 6.—W. F. Hanke, the youthful recluse who was found on McKee's hill about two weeks ago by the Berkeley police and later released, has been relocated.

Hanke was found in a starving condition at the top of McKee's hill, where he was making his home. He was peeked at the police station on a charge of insanity, but was released by Marshal Vollmer, who regarded him as harmless. Shortly afterward the father of the young recluse, who is a wealthy mine owner of Rich Gulch, Coluine county, made his appearance at the police station in search of his son.

Marshal Vollmer promised to do everything to relocate the boy and when he was seen aboard a San Pablo avenue car at 1 o'clock this morning he was immediately taken into custody. He will be held until communication can be had with his father.

MISSIONARY KLINE HAS PASSED AWAY

NOTRE DAME, Ind., Oct. 6.—Rev. Peter Paul Kline, a well-known missionary of the Order of Holy Cross, died last night. He was formerly president of the Holy Cross college at New Orleans and was also president of the Stedwards college at Austin, Tex. He was born in Cincinnati in 1862.

AMUSEMENTS AT THEATERS

Good Shows at the Macdonough, Idora Park and at Ye Liberty.

The Elford Company will begin the last six nights of its season at the Macdonough this Monday night with a magnificent production of the famous comedy-drama "That Girl From Texas," which proved the greatest triumph of Katie Putnam's starring career and has packed the theaters wherever it has been played. Its author is C. T. Dazey, who wrote "In Old Kentucky." The first act of the play takes place at Mrs. Elford's home on the Hudson, the second and third acts at Kenwood Manor in Ireland and the last in Texas. It is the story of a young American girl of Irish parentage, who suddenly becomes a peeress in her own right and is a remarkable throughout for dramatic and stirring incidents. Agnes Williams Johns will play May Percy, the "Little Maverick," Katie Putnam's role, which should fit her like the proverbial glove. Norval MacGregor, the popular leading man, will make his reappearance after quite an absence and will have his opportunity as Lord Kenwood. James Corrigan will be Peter Bunker, a sort of "Potter of Texas," and William R. Abram will disport himself as the French Count de Chambray, Rupert Drum as the middle man, Carson Ellis as the warlike Elsie Farleigh and Pauline Matland as Mrs. Farleigh.

The only matinee of "That Girl From Texas" will take place next Saturday and the last performance of Elford of the season will be given next Saturday night. The company opens the following night at the Yosemite Theatre in Stockton.

The Elford season will have lasted twenty-three consecutive weeks and during the whole time the Macdonough has been crowded. Mr. Elford selects "That Girl From Texas" to conclude his engagement because he considers it one of the best plays in his repertoire.

IDORA PARK. "The Idol's Eye" will enter the third and last week of its successful run at Idora Park next Monday night. Thousands have enjoyed the charming music of Victor Herbert and laughter at the comicallies of Ferrie Hartman and Walter De Leon, and the attendance promises to keep big until the very end.

The week following we shall see one of the best comedy or light opera in Gilbert and Sullivan's fantastic work, "Iolanthe," or "The Peer and the Peri." The mere mention of Gilbert and Sullivan's names in connection with an opera is assurance of the brightest wit and most charming melody, for in the hands of the two great composers never for single moment have been equaled. There is not a note of Sir Arthur Sullivan's music that is not of the highest value and all critics unite in admitting that in "Iolanthe" we get Sullivan at his very best. The music is catchy, jingling and melodious, but never for single moment momentous, and the ensemble where the principals, chorus and complete orchestra unite with a military band on the stage is a most stunning bit of composition.

Idora's bright satirical humor is always fresh and welcome and this production will be from a musical standpoint the most important yet attempted at Idora Park.

After "Iolanthe" the brilliant comedy opera, "The Tar and the Tartar" will be produced.

For the Sunday "twilight" concert at 7 o'clock tomorrow night by the united Idora Military Band and Idora Opera Orchestra, Director George E. Williams has arranged the following program, which will be conducted by Mr. William Mahood:

1. March, "Willow Love," Sorrentino
2. Overture, "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna," Suppe
3. Choralistic, "The Freacher and the Bear," Sorenson
4. Waltz, "Woman's Love," Fährbach
5. Cornet solo, selected, performed by Leader William Mahood
6. Selection, "Geo. Washington Jr."
7. Favourite pathetic, "Love and Passion," Coban
8. March, "Old Heidelberg," Kerry Mills

There is no extra charge for the concert, so that for one dime any one can spend a day in the beautiful part, enjoy the open-air skating rink and hear a splendid band concert by a magnificent aggregation of musicians.

ELLEN BEACH YAW COMING. The first of the great musical stars to be presented by Will Greenbaum this season will be the great lyric soprano, Ellen Beach Yaw, a California girl whose name stands at the very head of the list of the world's great concert singers. Miss Yaw will appear here very shortly, and full particulars will soon be announced.

"CHECKERS" AT MACDONOUGH. "Checkers" will begin an engagement of one week only commencing Sunday, October 14, at the Macdonough, and such play-goers who do not see the popular play will, it reports be reliable, miss a treat. "Checkers" is a comedy of the drama, as it has so frequently been described. It is a slice of everyday life, humanized and put upon the stage. The very elements of existence as it has been on the broad thoroughfare of the nation, are blended in "Checkers." It shows the idealism, the hopes, excitements and frailties of life, and it shows them without strain, and yet in the clean, unproblematic way, which makes the performance something which everybody may see. "Give every man his chance," President Roosevelt wrote on New Year's day. That is what "Checkers" wants in the play. He gets it and wins, to the well-earned delight of the other characters in the play and the delectation of the people on the other side of the footlights.

It is pleasant to record the success of Hans Robert, the phenomenal young actor who has been secured to play the title role. Doubly pleasant because he is a young man who has not seemed to have his way to the front, and has done it. He has won enough praise during his connection with "Checkers" to turn the head of an older man, and the same can be said of the race track tout of Dave Braham, Jr., the uncle of Charles Willard, the Arthur Kendall of Wallace Warshawsky and the George Lynde of Olin Nethercole. Quincy Adams Sawyer, "Eddie in Toyland," "Buster Brown," McIntyre and Heath in "The Ham Tree," West's Minstrels, "The Umpire,"

CUBAN OUTLOOK IS ASSURING

Taft Asked if More Than 900 Troops Will Be Needed—Fails to Reply.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Owing to the satisfactory aspect of affairs in Cuba, Secretary Taft has been asked by cable if in his judgment it is necessary to send to the island more troops than the nine hundred now on board the transport Sumner, due in Havana today or tomorrow. He has not yet responded, and meanwhile preparations will continue for the dispatch of the entire force of 5,000 men, as originally planned.

Templeton is "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway," "The County Chairman," Murray and Mack, "The Virginian," "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," Raymond Hitchcock in "The Galop," John Drew, Viola Allen, Maude Adams, Nat Goodwin, Sousa's "The Free Lance," W. H. Crane and Ellis Leltoria. Mr. Hall has also secured for the winter season the Columbia theater orchestra, including its famous leader G. Seldurina.

SKATING RINK. The Lakeside skating rink is a scene of considerable activity these days, with events of more than ordinary interest following each other in rapid sequence. This week has witnessed a number of fascinating contests, and tonight is to conclude the week with what promises to be the most exciting of the lot.

The feature this evening is to be a ladies' race, a contest between members of the feminine persuasion is always of extreme interest, but when the entries include the champion woman racer of the Pacific coast, the event should be enough to stir the blood of the most blasé.

Miss Louise Jones, who has proved her superiority to every female aspirant for honors on the coast, and who, according to her supporters, is the peer of any woman racer in the United States, is to enter the race, and though of course the odds are as far as known against her who can give her any sort of a race on even terms, the event will be a handicap affair with very liberal—almost prohibitive—handicaps, so there is sure to be an exciting race. On Monday night of next week the fourth heat of the race for the championship of the high school takes place and there are a number of other interesting events scheduled for the balance of the week, which the management has not yet announced.

NOVELTY THEATER. The Novelty theater has a varied and entertaining bill to present to its patrons next week. The new bill will commence at the matinee on Monday, October 8, and will include several headliners direct from the East. The famous "Mime Four," whose singing, dancing and mimics are unsurpassed, have been engaged, as well as Johnny Wall, the minstrel man, comedians and monologists, who is at the head of black face entertainers; Durr and Welmer, automobile girls who are splendid conversationalists and parody singers, and a number of other comedians of high-profile fun-making powers.

Another strong musical feature of next week's bill will be Adams and Edwards, who furnish a sketch, combining the Dutchman and operatic soprano. The fame of this act has gone before the pair, and it is expected that they will give patrons of the Bell the same treat that was furnished by the excellent vocal trio last week.

America's cleverest acrobats, the world-famous Fredericks family, have been engaged at an enormous expense to complete this strong bill. The motion pictures will be two entirely new reels, imported from Europe.

but it is his duty to notify the port authorities that they are bound, where they may be stopped and the captain fined.

The schooner W. J. Patterson was the only departure from this port today.
Several others have been in port a long time, but the inability of the labor employed to handle lumber fast is keeping them tied up.

A sailor named Martin Hermanson, who was crawling off San Nicholas Island, was drowned four days ago while taking fish out of a trap. He had a companion with him, they being the only persons on the island, and the other man has just reported to this place. The body was not found.

GAS EXPLODES IN AN AIRSHIP

Accident Happens Near Ground and Aeronaut Escapes Badly Burned.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by the Hearst News Service over longest leased wire
in the world.)

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 6.—The bag of the airship belonging to Ivy Baldwin, the aeronaut, blew up at the Association Hall park, at Twentieth and Oliver streets, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The framework on which Baldwin rode was ten feet above the ground when the accident occurred. Baldwin jumped from it immediately after the explosion. His face was burned by the blazing gas, but he was otherwise unharmed. The bag of the airship was destroyed by fire.

After the airship had been launched it floated towards the east fence of the ball park. Colliding with this the bag was sent downward. A portion of it came in contact with the revolving propeller and from the tip made in the cloth gas escaped. This was ignited by the spark and the explosion resulted.

The airship was just about level with the fence of the park in its flight. About 400 spectators were watching the aerionaut and his aerial machine when the accident happened. Only a few of those who had helped to launch the airship saw the cause of the explosion.

MINING OPERATOR AND EDITOR.

The Versatile "Billy" Booth Visits
Oakland.

The successful career of W. W. Booth, editor and proprietor of the Tonopah Banner, reads like an Arabian Knight story.

Several years ago Mr. Booth was a printer employed on the Oakland Vidette, and Dame Fortune certainly failed to smile upon the lad who had the "short sorts" and "phat takes." After a thoroughly disheartening experience in that chosen field Mr. Booth succeeded in finding enough money to secure passage to Tonopah when that lively camp was but a vague mirage on the financial sky.

By dint of energy and perseverance
Mr. Booth has established a small weekly paper in that struggling mining camp. From a meager four-page sheet it has grown to a more substantial publication, until today it is the leading paper in that rich gold field.

Mr. Booth has carefully investigated the various mining enterprises and cautiously invested means, until today it is said that the "honest printer" has a handsome bank account and has one of the largest printing institutions in Nevada.

Mr. Booth has just purchased new linotypes and a complete bookbinding apparatus, and is preparing to meet the needs of the vast mercantile interests now residing there.

Mr. Booth has all the striking characteristics of a mining man, and exhibits a calm disposition, a genial nature and frankness that marks him as a favorite among all with whom he comes in contact.

FIELD FOR AMERICAN
PIANOS IN FRANCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Replying to a request for information, Consul General Robert P. Skinner of Marseilles says that the most famous and also the most expensive piano in France bears a well known American name, mainly because it has been the concert piano preference of a number of great artists.

"Its price prevents it from becoming a very popular instrument," says Mr.
Skinner, "in spite of its recognized superiority. The piano of commerce must sell at retail for between $100 and $200. The old-fashioned square piano is no longer manufactured and is seldom seen in this country. The ordinary French upright piano has a range of seven octaves, and the grand piano seven and one-fourth octaves.
The favorite odds for piano cases are popular and walnut, and these are not highly varnished as in the United States but are waxed and polished.
The present range of prices for French pianos is, for uprights, $99 to $325 wholesale and $115 to $347 retail, and for grand pianos $251 to $733
wholesale and $289 to $772 retail.
"The retail dealer makes small profits—about $20 on an upright instrument and $40 on a grand piano. American pianos already have a high reputation in France by which our excellent low-priced instruments might profit, provided they could be exported and support the French touch, which in the case of American pianos would be 60¢. ($11.55) for each upright piano and 85¢. ($16.40) for each grand piano."

RARE BIRDS FROM AFAR.
By the Minneapolis, of the Atlantic transport line, which reached port Monday, there arrived from London a large consignment of birds and reptiles intended for the New York Zoological Gardens. The shipment comprises forty-seven cases of birds and two of reptiles.

Will Extend Route From Fourteenth and Washington to Sixteenth Street Depot.

Commencing tomorrow morning, the Alameda cars which now run from High street and Santa Clara avenue, Alameda, to Fourteenth and Washington streets in this city, will run along Fourteenth street to the Sixteenth-street station of the Southern Pacific Company.

For two days a large gang of men has been busy placing the curve tracks from Washington into Fourteenth street. The traction company also has men at work repaving Washington street, which will be in passable condition before many days.

GLASS.

The newest thing in building blocks is the use of glass. A bank building and a church are proposed to be erected in Des Moines, Ia. The walls will be double, with a foot of dead air space between, of milk-white opalescent glass one-fourth of an inch thick, securely fixed in steel frames, which are laced together. In a building such as this, with mechanical ventilation, no window are needed, the light passing clear through the walls. It is weather these walls would be self-cleaning, and in addition there would be no dark corners, since the light could penetrate to every part of the building. The overall effect will resemble a highly polished marble wall, with glass ornamentation in imitation of onyx. It will not be long before houses come to be built of the same light, hygienic material.

Serious Accusations Are Made Against Abe Ruef.

THE KNAVE

Police Department of City Is in Very Bad Shape.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6.—Myrtle Cerf has handled the grand jury in accordance with directions received from Abe Ruef. The blame for the continuous slaughter by the United Railroads has been passed up to the Board of Public Works just at the moment when the president of that body was undergoing decapitation by order of the said Ruef. Mr. Cerf, Ruef's grand jury foreman, exonerates the railroad on the ground that Maestretti and his colleagues on the Board of Public Works have neglected to clear the streets of debris. This justifies Ruef's acting mayor in dismissing Maestretti for incompetency. It also makes Pat Calhoun smile. It proves in addition that Abe Ruef is a remarkably clever strategist in his peculiar sphere.

Maestretti retorts that Acting Mayor Gallagher, as chairman of the Finance Committee of the Board of Supervisors, has withheld the funds required to clear the streets, but that counts for little. Gallagher probably did that by Ruef's direction in order to put Maestretti in a hole. That Maestretti is in the hole and the United Railroads out of it shows that Ruef still knows how to play the game to his own advantage better than any other boss San Francisco has ever known. He has made Maestretti a scapegoat for the sins of the United Railroads, and at the same time has given Gallagher an excuse for reorganizing the Board of Public Works.

Maestretti has set up a roar over his removal from the Works Board, but he will tell nothing that will be of assistance to justice. He cannot expose the graft without incriminating himself. He has stated that Ruef tried to sell the San Francisco delegation to the Santa Cruz convention to Black Hayes for $25,000, and did sell it to somebody else for $13,000. That is not what people want to know. Maestretti's assertion may or may not be true, but in any event it cannot be proved, and has no bearing on the stories of graft in connection with the operations of the Board of Public Works. The charge does not even allege a criminal offense under the law. Ruef can afford to laugh at such revelations.

Maestretti does make one serious allegation. He says the bills for work done in clearing up the streets have been held up by the Finance Committee of which Gallagher is chairman, till somebody—he does not tell who—gets ten per cent to boost them through. If he would tell what bills were held up and who got the ten per cent he would disclose something to work upon.

But justice can expect no aid from Maestretti. He is simply one of the gang, nothing more. He has been kicked out of office for disobeying Ruef, not for doing his duty or failing to do it, and he is in no position to turn State's evidence. The Maestretti regime in the Board of Works was notoriously rotten. Nobody regrets it, because it was incompetent as well. The change is due to low motives, but they are quite as good as the motives which dictated Maestretti's appointment, hence is not a cause for public indignation.

Jerry Dinan has not made good as Chief of Police, neither has he pleased Abe Ruef. He is now undergoing a process of discipline that will lose him his baton if he does not come off his high horse. Ed. Wrenn will not be made Inspector of Police and given command of the detective force. Gallagher has ordered that Duke be made captain of detectives and Lieutenant Conboy be advanced to a captaincy. This will give Tom Gibson, one of the most capable men on the detective corps, a chance to distinguish himself. Dinan is jealous of Duke and doesn't like Gibson. He is blustering a good deal and saying he will have his way, but he will not. He will either give in or step down and out.

Dinan has banked too heavily on being the mayor's personal choice for chief of police. He has neglected to make a showing and took no pains to please Ruef. He has protected a lot of blind tiger joints, the proprietors of which had not obtained Ruef's permission to do business in violation of the law. This the little boss has resented as an interference with his business. It has also provoked the virtuous indignation of Gallagher, who groans with pain when Ruef has the belly-ache.

Now Dinan has delivered himself into the hands of his enemies by failing to catch any of the thugs and thieves who have been reaping a harvest in San Francisco lately. Hundreds of men have been held up and robbed on the streets during the last few weeks, but not a footpad has been captured. No arrests have followed a series of daring burglaries. The looting in broad daylight of the Japanese bank and the murder of its president, following close on the heels of the murder of Friede, the merchant, has created a feeling of terror in the community. And while the police are looking for the Japanese bank robbers, three highwaymen enter a saloon in the heart of the city and rob fifteen guests of the place. Yet nothing is done. The chief throws up his hands and says he has no clue to the criminals.

His failure gives Gallagher a pretext for reading him the riot act and turning his recommendations down. It is useless for Dinan to resist, for the Police Board will obey Gallagher and the Supervisors will do as Ruef commands. No other boss ever controlled a Board of Supervisors so completely as Ruef controls this one. There is not even a chirp against his authority. Not a member disputes his commands. He is given an unquestioning obedience that is marvelous in view of the contemptuous manner in which he sometimes treats the dummies he has placed in office.

Ruef was talking with some one on the street the other day when a Supervisor came up and said, "Good morning, Mr. Ruef."

"Go away, and don't interrupt me when I am busy," said the boss, angrily.

The Supervisor slunk away abashed and when Ruef had finished his talk humbly apologized for offending the boss. This is merely one example of the way Ruef makes his creatures cringe and crawl in his presence.

It is all a fiction about there being anything like a break between Ruef and Schmitz. A great deal of intrigue has been wasted in an endeavor to pry Schmitz and Ruef apart, but it has been labor thrown away. The mayor led some people to believe that he was dissatisfied with Ruef's doings, but on the show down Ruef is seen to be master of the works. His man Gallagher is swinging the ax merrily under his orders, and a number of heads are likely to fall before Schmitz gets through sight-seeing in Europe. Schmitz had a thorough understanding with Ruef before he left the city. It suited him to have certain things done, but concluded it was best for him to be away while the performance was going on. He knew before his departure what was going to happen to Maestretti and Dinan. Maestretti's death warrant was signed when Gallagher was made acting mayor. It was also understood that Dinan's peacock feather was to be trimmed up till it would disgrace a hoot mon's bonnet.

Ruef has again displayed his courage by nominating Frank French for the Senate in defiance of public opinion. French was acquitted by a jury of the boodle charges, but he was nevertheless expelled from the Senate. Two of his associates were convicted, and a third, Wright of San Jose, jumped his bail and fled the country. Should French be elected there will be a great outcry all over the State against permitting him to take his seat; which, of course, would militate tremendously against Ruef's ambition to go to the Senate.

It seems that with all his shrewdness Ruef does not comprehend the rural way of thinking or take into account the effect of popular sentiment on members of the Legislature elected outside of San Francisco. He wants holdover Senators who will stand by him and cares not a hang for public opinion. But his nomination of French may lose him the district, for it has encouraged the Democrats to put up a hard fight against him. The district is normally close, and Kennedy, French's opponent, has considerable strength. Still Ruef is such a consummate political general that he is likely to land French despite his record and the opposition it provokes.

As I predicted in my last letter, Judge Lawlor has been denounced by the Labor Council. That body has also demanded that Julius Kahn's name be taken off the labor ticket, and Dave Hirschberg's substituted. Hirschberg already has the Democratic and Independence League nominations, and if he could get the Union Labor endorsement would stand an excellent chance of election. Hirschberg has managed to keep on good terms with all the warring Democratic factions, and it a good talker on the stump. Ruef is not likely to let him get Kahn's place on the Union Labor ticket, however, and without that he has a mighty slim chance.

Robert Harrison, who was nominated by the Democrats and Union Labor people for Associate Justice of the District Court of Appeals, is almost as much a man of mystery as the man who struck Billy Patterson. Cleve Dam is said to know him, but nobody else does. He was a stranger to the two conventions who nominated him, and may turn out to be one of Dam's practical jokes. Cleve insisted that there was such a man, and swore a mighty oath that he is both a Democrat and a lawyer. As Judge Dooling said he wanted another Democrat on the ticket with him, Harrison was nominated. This dished the scheme which the leading Democratic lawyers favored of putting Judge Hall on the Democratic ticket.

Ruef's hostility is not expected to hurt Judge Kerrigan very much. The boss wants to beat Lawlor much more than he desires to defeat Kerrigan; besides, he has too many nuts of his own to rake out of the fire to waste time trying to beat every man who displeases him. Kerrigan has the support of many Democratic lawyers, and will not be fought by Gavin McNab, whose niece he married. Outside of San Francisco Ruef's enmity is expected to help him.

Coffey, Lawlor, Mogan and Conlan are the Democratic nominees for the Superior bench. Coffey and Conlan—the best and the worst—are regarded as surest of election. Ruef does not like Coffey, but he positively hates Lawlor. His influence kept Coffey off the Union Labor ticket, and secured an emphatic condemnation of Lawlor, but somebody worked the pipes on him to the extent of getting Kahn put under the ban at the same time. Graham, who is on both the Republican and Union Labor tickets, is regarded as sure of election, so if Coffey and Conlan are to be regarded as winners, Lawlor and Mogan will have to scrap between themselves for the fourth place.

But Charley Wheeler, Gilliard Stoney and a few other lawyers are beating up a scheme to name an independent judicial ticket, which may help Lawlor out and make the running hard for Conlan, Mogan and Graham.

It is to be noted that Theodore Bell is not denouncing Abe Ruef in his speeches. He roasts Herrin and Hearst, but lets Ruef alone. A story is current that some of the labor leaders asked him to desist after he had given Ruef a scoring in his Stockton speech. Since that time Bell has had nothing to say against Ruef. This is causing people to suspect that Ruef is quietly aiding the Democratic candidate or making his friends believe so. He is helping out as against Langdon, that is quite certain.

There is a prospect that there will be a general shut down for the winter in this city as soon as the rains set in. The labor situation is so unsettled and so unsatisfactory and building materials so costly and difficult to obtain that there is a disposition to adopt heroic measures to obtain relief. Bankers, builders and contractors have been discussing the proposition for two or three weeks and are nearer an understanding now than ever before. The plan is for those interested to stand together to enforce a general lockout in the hope of bringing the unions and the material men to terms.

While the material men are blaming the unions for the excessive cost of rebuilding, they have been charging all the traffic will bear, and a little more. It is an open secret, moreover, that they have been in alliance with the unions belonging to the building trades. An effort is now being made to break up the alliance heretofore existing between the unions and the material men, and get the latter to stand in against the former. The strike in the Oakland mills is likely to be an entering wedge. Two well-known bankers and two of the largest contractors in the city told me that a general suspension of building operations immediately after the election was not unlikely. They agreed that the exactions for labor and material were becoming so intolerable as to make the outlook for San Francisco very dismal.

NEWS FROM BERKELEY AND CITY OF ALAMEDA

QUESTION OF TAXES IS PROPOUNDED BY ANNEXATION VOTER

Fruitvale Man Wants to Know if Rates Would Be Less Under Separate Incorporation.

Editor TRIBUNE: Are there any advantages that could be derived from the incorporation of Fruitvale that would be superior to the advantages incident to the annexation to the city of Oakland?

The advocates of incorporation should present to the tax payers of Fruitvale a detailed statement of the advantages to be derived from incorporation and which they affirm are superior to the advantages incident to annexation.

The advocates of incorporation hold the affirmative of this issue and the burden of proof is upon them.

Let those who favor incorporation prove, if they can, to the tax payers of Fruitvale (who will say a jury in this matter) that the taxes, including special assessments, under separate incorporation would be less than they would be by annexation to the city of Oakland—benefits considered.

The opponents of annexation appear to be distrustful and fear that Fruitvale would lose its identity and individuality if annexed to Oakland. They should be reminded, however, of the manifest inconsistency in attempting to destroy the identity of Melrose, by including Melrose in the proposed Fruitvale incorporation.

New Melrose doubtless appreciates the advantages of retaining its identity and individuality and the people of Melrose can perceive no particular advantage in being swallowed bodily by the proposed Fruitvale corporation.

The new Melrose station is about three months old and contains more places of business than Fruitvale contained in three years from the date of its first establishment. The indications are that Melrose as a business point has superior advantages over Fruitvale. That the railroad company so considered it is evident from the fact that they propose to make it a class A station, to wit: not only for passengers, but also for freight with express and telegraph. The freight receipts alone for the month of September at this station are said to have reached about $10,000. Railroad companies are supposed to know the place for prospective business and the company has given New Melrose one of their best and most convenient depots. (Southeast corporations that we have so much about in "Yellow Journals" do not estimate depots from sentiment, but for business.)

When Melrose began to show indications of growth, the advocates of Fruitvale incorporation suggested to the people of Melrose that they should adopt the name of East Fruitvale—that it would be a much nicer name than Melrose—the people of Melrose did not take kindly to this suggestion.

JUNIORS BEAT SOPHOMORES

Spectacular Game of Rugby Played on California Campus.

BERKELEY, Oct. 6.—In a spectacular game of Rugby the junior sophomores on the California campus this afternoon by a score of 6 to 0. The game was vigorously contested all the way through.

Until the latter part of the second half it looked as if the game would end with neither side scoring. The juniors were then netted for the juniors by Ball, who fell on the ball after it had rolled over the line. Burdick kicked an easy goal.

VIGOROUS DRIVE.

The sophomores started the play a few minutes after 3:30 o'clock with a lustrous drive by Stanton that rolled the ball well into their opponents' territory. The sophomores passed the ball down the field, endangering the junior goal line, and nearly succeeded in putting the leather sphere over the line.

The junior backs, catching the ball at an opportune moment, shoved the ball back up the field, only to lose it after gaining an advantageous position well in the enemy's territory. Stanton, a sophomore back with a hard fifty-yard drive, put the juniors on the defensive again, and the juniors, reciprocating the move, forced the ball near the sophomore goal line. The juniors' possession of the ball and in a knowledge of the tactics of the game, the juniors' goal line.

The juniors opened the second twenty-two-minute period with a hard kick into the sophomore territory. The punt was returned. A dashing and run by Herriott placed the sophomore goal in jeopardy again. A few minutes later the juniors scored on Ball's move, and the score stood in favor of the upper classmen.

BERKELEY'S BABIES WIN

Defeat Santa Cruz in a Rugby Game by Score of 18 to 0.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by the Hearst News Service over longest leased wire in the world.)

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Oct. 6.—The blues and gold "Tigers" of Berkeley played a snappy article of Rugby football against the Surf-City squad at the Tent-City grounds this afternoon, and won in rather easy style by a score of 18 to 0. The Santa Cruzes failed to put up the game they did against Stanford, especially in scrum plays and dribbling the ball.

The visitors played an aggressive game in the first half, being especially strong in scrummages and passing the ball. The play during the first half was frequently stopped, owing to players receiving minor injuries, none of which, however, affected the lineup of either team. The locals were apparently too tight for the Berkeley players, and were compelled to play on the defensive most of the time. Both teams were paralyzed several times for mistakes by referee Dr. Felton Taylor, especially the Santa Cruzes, who at times in their anxiety to make points became careless.

ELECTRIC SHOCK FATAL TO HORSE

Hopkin Hughes Narrowly Escaped Death When Team Ran Into Live Wire.

PLEASANTON, Oct. 6.—A horse was killed about two miles east of Pleasanton Thursday. A live wire had been blown across the road and Hopkin Hughes, not seeing it, almost drove to his own death, as well as that of the horses. Mr. Hughes and one horse, however, escaped with a severe shock. Workmen from Livermore soon repaired the damage and replaced the wire.

Surprise parties have been the thing this week. In addition to those reported Miss Angie Bernal was also the recipient of a pleasant and largely attended party on the occasion of her birthday. The young people found a cordial welcome at the Bernal home and could not but enjoy themselves immensely.

A merry party drove to Danville Friday evening to attend a dance given by the Rebekahs. They left about 7 o'clock and returned in the small hours of the morning, after a fine moonlight drive. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Wells, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Adams, Mrs. Latham, Mrs. Emma Morris, the Misses Pauline Kruse, Gertrude Paulsen, Lulu Schween, Elsie Cochran, Donna Buttner, Elsie Bendoy and Messrs. Jack Perkins, Jack Ehnay and Ed Brown.

The Livermore High school baseball team played a game with the Grammar school team on Friday afternoon. The locals proved a little too much for the visitors and won by a score of 14 to 12. Following is the Pleasanton team: Ed Neal, Tony Cardozo, George Davis, W. Vierra, F. Alameda, Tony George, Henry Veigland, DeWitt Colestock, Herman Uendoeder.

GIRL INJURED; DISAPPEARS

Thrown From Her Bicycle, She Suddenly Drops From Sight.

Mystery surrounds the whereabouts of pretty Miss Irene Lambert, the actress, who was thrown from her bicycle at Ninth and Broadway about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. While it is not thought the girl was very seriously injured, the fact that no one knows where she was taken after the accident has caused uneasiness among her friends, as was evidenced when inquiries were made at the Receiving Hospital last night in an effort to locate her.

When a TRIBUNE representative called at the girl's home, 860 Alice street, at 10 o'clock last night, he was met by the parents, who were just returning to the house, apparently having ended an unsuccessful search for their daughter.

Frank J. Lambert, the father, who is connected with the West Coast Printing Company, expressed a reluctance to talk about his daughter's accident. In fact, he denied it altogether. He claimed it was a cousin of Miss Lambert who was injured and that she had been taken to the residence of her aunt, whose address he did not know.

Inquiry at the Providence, Fabola and other hospitals failed to show that the girl was there.

ELECTRIC CAR CHASES HORSE

Overtakes Runaway Animal and Crashes Into Him, Breaking a Leg.

Passengers on a Grove street car that was passing Thirty-fifth street about 6:40 o'clock last evening were treated to the novelty of a runaway horse being chased by the motorman of their car. He eventually caught the animal, which suddenly stopped on the tracks directly in the path of the onrushing trolley. Although the motorman jarred those riding on the car by the suddenness with which he applied the brakes, he could not check the speed of the conveyance and it struck the animal with terrific force, breaking its leg, according to one of the passengers. No names could be learned.

"EFFUSIVE BURSTIS" IS RESULT OF HORSE'S KICK

Effusive burstitis is what happened to George Swannell, a laborer 22 years of age, when he was kicked on the knee by a fractious horse at Bitchertown last night. After Dr. H. Koford had diagnosed his injury and dressed it, he allowed Swannell to depart for his home on the Oriental house.

STUDENTS TO MOVE SEATS

If Labor Tie-Up Occurs, U. C. Men Will Help Prepare California Field.

BERKELEY, Oct. 6.—Should there be a complete tie-up of labor during the next few weeks, the men students of the University of California will be willing to work under Contractor Grant for the purpose of moving the bleachers east on California field. The field must be widened and placed in shape for the big game which will take place on November 10.—Statement by Ralph Merritt, president of the Associated Students of the University of California.

Should the labor troubles that now threaten to block building become so critical that the men students were ordered to take the task of moving the bleachers on California field, cannot secure union labor, he will employ the young men of the student body.

BOUND TO TALK.

Should the students really drop their books, doff their coats, don overalls and attempt to move the bleachers in lieu of union carpenters and painters, there is bound to be a world of talk over the matter.

Once before the students entered the field with union labor and no end of discussion followed. Then the students worked unloading vessels on the Oakland waterfront while the stevedores were on a strike. The students were criticized, called "scabs" and denounced by resolution in labor councils. But they defied themselves by declaring that they needed the money to put themselves through college.

DECLARE THEY HAVE CAUSE.

This time the students declare they will have good cause to assist in moving the bleachers on their own field. They say that the big row of seats must be moved before the annual football contest with Stanford and the American Legion is not wide enough for the modern Rugby game.

"All the interest I have in the matter," said Contractor Grant, "is to see that the work is done; in other words, that the field is ready for the game on November 10. I have put up a bond to assure that the work will be done by that time. If I am blocked in my efforts to get union labor I will most certainly call on students who wish to be employed by me as laborers. The field will be widened in time for the big game, rest assured of that, even if I have to call on all the young men in the university to assist me."

WHEELER DEFENDS STUDENTS.

At the time of the controversy over the students taking the places of stevedores during the strike on the Oakland water front, President Wheeler took the side of the college men. The leading college men believe that President Wheeler will stand by his proteges if they wish to assist in moving the seats for the scheduled big game, in which he is taking more than ordinary interest.

The contract was awarded to Grant by the executive committee of the Associated Students, who have agreed to pay him $2000 for doing the work. If a general strike is declared the students will be employed and a large portion of the sum will be turned back into the coffers of the Associated Students.

BUSCH MAY BUY THE GARDENS

Brewer Would Turn West End Resort Into Amusement Place.

ALAMEDA, Oct. 6.—M. A. Miller, associated with the real estate firm of Hammond & Hammond, returned from the East yesterday, where he went to negotiate the sale of the Neptune Gardens at the West End. Miller did not close the sale of the property, but it has been taken under consideration by Adolphus Busch, the brewer. It was stated that the only objection to the property was the cool evenings. Miller declared that a company start an amusement place on the open air scheme, and a number of amusement companies are endeavor to dispose of the land for that object. He stated that he would know definitely the plans of the Eastern men by the middle of November.

SOCIETY :: NEWS OF THE SMART SET :: GOSSIP

One of the most important engagements of the season was announced yesterday, when Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Woodbury announced the engagement of their daughter, Alysone Delight, to Mr. Edward Ignatius de Laveaga.

The engagement was announced at a dinner given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury at the Home Club.

The engagement is a very notable one, since the families are so well known in social circles about the bay. Mr. Woodbury is well known in the field of letters on this coast, and Mrs. Woodbury is the able and very popular president of the Ebell Club, one of the leading women's clubs of the coast.

The de Laveaga represent one of the finest families on the coast, very representative and very conservative. Mr. Edward de Laveaga is a college man, and one for whom his friends predict a most brilliant future, successful in many ways.

The engagement is a very happy one, and will call out many congratulations and good wishes from the large circle of friends which both families have.

The dinner at the Home Club was a most interesting affair, the guests being relatives of the families.

Those at the dinner were Mr. M. A. de Laveaga, father of the groom-elect, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Welch, Mr. Edward de Laveaga, Miss Ruth Woodbury, Mr. and Mrs. E. Y. ## SPELLBOUND BEFORE TRAIN

Berkeley Girl Stands on Track and Sees Locomotive Bearing Down.

BERKELEY, Oct. 6.—Passengers waiting for the local trains at Berkeley station tonight were horrified to see a young woman standing directly in the middle of one of the tracks as the 9:45 o'clock Southern Pacific train was pulling into the depot from San Francisco. The engineer blew a sharp blast of the whistle and just as the girl who was found to be Miss Mary Bauer, a former student at the State university, stepped off the track, the locomotive whizzed by. She was so close to the engine when she walked on the rails that the pilot brushed her garments. Miss Bauer, almost fainting after her experience, was escorted to a nearby drug store where she was revived and sent home.

MUST FACE A GRAVE CHARGE

Woman Accused of Assisting in Immoral Game Out on Bail.

Gabrielle Mauray, who was arrested Friday night at her residence, 469 Fifth street, by Chief Deputy United States Marshal George Burnham, charged with being an accessory to her alleged husband, Alfred Mauray, accused of importing young girls from France to this country for immoral purposes, was brought before Commissioner Heacock in the Federal court at San Francisco yesterday morning and held over in $2000 bail. She was released at the county jail at 10 o'clock last night. Osgood Brothers, the druggists, having gone her bond.

WOMEN FALL INTO DITCH

BERKELEY, Oct. 6.—The lives of several women were endangered tonight by a ditch left open for the laying of pipes alongside the car tracks at the terminus of the Telegraph avenue line at Center street and Shattuck avenue. Two women, on alighting from the cars, in their haste to reach the sidewalk, rushed up the mound of earth that borders the ditch on the west side, only to feel the earth sinking beneath their feet. Several of the women were precipitated into the ditch, and at least two somewhat bruised, though luckily none were badly hurt.

SEEKS TROUBLE AND FINDS IT

Millwright Calls at Transfer Office and Is Given Pass to the Hospital.

When William Kelfer, 48 years old, a millwright, moved to 811 Forty-fifth street, this city, from Los Angeles three weeks ago, he discovered several days after his arrival that a crate of furniture was missing and accordingly he sent his wife to the Oakland Transfer Company to have them trace the article. Several visits of this nature failed to get any satisfaction from the company, so Kelfer himself decided to investigate the matter, and accordingly put in an appearance at the office, trouble lurking in his eye. Kelfer evidently did not take into consideration that the man who looks for trouble generally gets it, and he got his. He claims one of the clerks struck him with something, but whether it was a fist or a pair of brass knuckles he could not say.

Dr. H. Koford examined the man's injuries at the Receiving hospital last night and found that he had sustained a deep cut on the chin one inch and a quarter deep, extending into the mouth cavity, lacerations of the lower gum and three teeth loosened.

A representative of the transfer company stated that he heard Kelfer had called under the influence of liquor and was given a transfer to the hospital when he became obnoxious. The missing article he said was undoubtedly in the hands of the Union Transfer Company of San Francisco, as they had obtained the remaining consignment of the Kelfer household goods from that source.

WIFE OF A LEADING ATTORNEY IS DEAD.

After an illness of some duration Mrs. Edith Adams Whitney, wife of Frederick E. Whitney, a well-known attorney of this city, with offices at 321 Broadway, passed away last night at Fabiola hospital. Deceased was a native of Farmington, Maine. Mrs. Whitney is survived by her husband and a young son, Frederick Adams Whitney. The funeral will probably be held Monday from the late home of the deceased, 232 Eighth street.

MAGOOON GIVEN A FREE HAND

Not Hampered by Cuban Orders and All Roosevelt Wants is Quick Results.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by the Hearst News Service over longest leased wire in the world.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Secretary Root and Gov. Magoon, of Cuba, had a conference today at which the final instructions of the President to the governor were given. The brevity of the conference demonstrated that the governor of the island is not to be loaded down with instructions. He is to have a pretty free hand and all the President wants is results of the best sort that may be. Governor Magoon left for Cuba this afternoon, reaching there next Tuesday. The authority as governor will be turned over to the official as soon as Secretary Taft decides it is best.

The President did not discuss with his visitors the story of decreasing the number of soldiers and marines going to the island. General Bell, chief of staff of the army, said the President about the same time as Governor Magoon, but it is understood that they did not confer as to holding back some of the soldiers that have been ordered to Cuba. On the contrary, it is said there will be no changes in the orders that have been issued as to the departure of troops from Newport News and elsewhere.

Although the President is satisfied with the orderly progress of affairs under Secretary Taft, and especially the giving up of arms by both the regulars and insurgents, he does not care to take the responsibility of keeping troops away from the island at a time when they might be needed at a minute's notice and require a week or more to be transported from this country. The troops will be kept to the ground as long as the United States sees fit to turn over the islands to the natives, if this is ever done.

Unless there is a change of situation there, no orders will be issued countermmanding orders previously given for sailing. In order, however, to have official advice on the subject the President has called to Secretary Taft asking him to review the situation with a view of determining whether more troops should go than the 900 on the Sumner.

A cablegram from Taft to the effect that more troops are not necessary, would, of course, change the situation in a moment.

U. C. DEFEATS SAILOR MEN

Captures Game at Idora Park
Fete by Score of 8 to 5
After Dark.

Patrons of Idora Park fete given by the Ladies' Relief Society yesterday afternoon and evening in aid of the fund for rebuilding the orphanage and Old Persons' Home at Aden, which was burned a few months ago, had the privilege of witnessing many interesting affairs, but none more so than the first event of the day, which was a ball game at 1:30 p. m. between a picked team from the Yerba Buena Naval Training station and the regular University of California nine. The teams lined up as follows: Yerba Buena. Positions: University Cal. Murphy.....Catcher.....Schaefer Miller.....Pitcher.....Scholar Knowles (capt.) Left Field.....Steele Semuels.....First Base.....Myers Smallman.....Second Base.....Gliese Thorall.....Third Base.....Reid Fowler.....Center Field.....Heister Smith.....Right Field.....Gardner Burk.....Shortstop.....

Many had supposed that the collegians would have a walkover with their naval brethren, but such was not the case, and though the U. C. team managed to win out, it was only after nine innings of his team struggling. The final score was 8 to 5.

DISAPPEARS WITH MONEY

Berkeley Police Seek to Solve Mystery of Aged Person's Absence.

BERKELEY, Oct. 6.—The local police are making an effort to solve the mystery of the disappearance of Ernest Laveron, aged 62, who left his home on the first of the month to make some purchases, with between $50 and $60 in gold. Thus far no trace has been found of Laveron, and his wife is almost frantic with fear that her husband may have met with foul play. Laveron was a resident of Berkeley but for the past few weeks has been sojourning in Sausalito. Last Monday he left the house, which he has occupied in Sausalito this summer, and since that time nothing has been seen of him.

Mrs. Laveron believes that the missing man was well preserved. He had white hair and a white mustache, and was rather slim. He was 5 feet 7 inches in height, and wore a black Derby hat. He spoke English fluently, though with a slight French accent.

FOR A NEW MARRIAGE SERVICE. As a suggestion to the workers for a universal divorce law a young minister of this city submits an idea for a new and universal marriage service. "The average questions asked in such a service as a right," he says, "but some should be added to them to be proposed to both parties to the contract. For instance: 'Do you prefer the country? Are you a vegetarian, and what kind of food is essential to your well-being?' 'What quantity of fresh air do you need in your sleeping apartment and what amount of covers do you use?' 'If, upon an agreement of yours concerning these issues and similar ones, the couple are permitted to marry, it would be very easy in any subsequent divorce proceedings to determine which was to blame.'"

Ceciliano Francisco is a Filipino. Ceciliano lives on the street Pacifico, San Francisco. He has a friend, who asked him to visit Oakland, last night, and he consented to cross the bay. They went to the Palace Club rooms at the corner of Twelfth street and Broadway, and there Francisco apparently saw a bowling game for the first time in his brief existence, for Francisco is only 18.

Therefore Ceciliano expressed surprise at the size of the large ball and he attempted to pick one of them up. He did not notice another of the same dimension swiftly approaching him, and he left hand against the sphere he was holding.

When Ceciliano pulled his finger out it was broken and Dr. Koford was called upon at the receiving hospital to set it. Ceciliano declares he does not care for the game of bowling.

MANIA IS HATE FOR DAUGHTER

Woman Lying in Wait on Street With a Pistol Declared to be Insane.

Unnatural hate of a mother for her daughter was brought out in the Superior Court yesterday morning when Mrs. Annie Brennan, a widow who is presumed to be wealthy, was on trial charged with being an insane person and a menace to her daughter's safety. Although evidence was brought forth that the woman, who is 54 years of age, is bright on all other subjects but her imaginary wrongs at the hands of Mrs. Mary Agnes Dooly, 307 Seventh street, the daughter, convinced the lunacy board, composed of Drs. Myra Knox and J. B. Wood, that the gray-haired prisoner is a dangerous character and they therefore recommended her commitment to an institution for the insane. Judge William H. Waste accordingly sent her to Napa.

Mrs. Brennan was arrested Friday by Police Officer McCready, at the corner of Seventh and Franklin streets, while lying in wait for her daughter with a revolver concealed in her handkerchief. As soon as Mrs. Dooly learned that her mother was in custody, she swore to an insanity complaint and her mother was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where she was placed in the insane ward by Warden Page.

When the case came up for a hearing, Mrs. Brennan was represented by Attorney Fred Button, while Attorney J. E. Johnson appeared for Mrs. Dooly. Placed on the stand, the daughter stated that her mother believed that she, Mrs. Dooly, was trying to obtain possession of her property by applying for a guardianship.

"It is untrue that I am trying to get her property," Judge said the daughter, with tears streaming down her cheeks, "but I do want my mother placed in some institution that will take care of her. She ought to be worth $20,000, but I do not know where the money is. I do not want her sent to an insane asylum, and I never applied for letters of guardianship."

"You have tried to get my property," said the mother, "and you have slandered me. I did go to the prosecuting attorney and try to have your husband arrested for insulting me, but he would not issue a warrant. I have called at the county clerk's office more than fifty times to inquire if you had made application to be appointed my guardian, and I found that I could get no information or redress. I determined that the case should be brought into court and bought the pistol to frighten you by firing it in the ground and forcing you to come before a judge so that the whole affair would come out."

Attorney Button called the court that he had made a search to ascertain if the guardianship application had been filed and discovered that it had not.

Mrs. Brennan refused to state where she kept her money or how much she was worth, when questioned by the court. It is known that she recently sold the Jackson-street property for $1700, and at one time was considered wealthy. Thomas Dooly, her son-in-law, is employed as an engineer by the Southern Pacific.

OFFICERS GO THROUGH ASIA'S WILD REGIONS

PEKING, Oct. 6.—Two British officers, Colonel C. Bruce and Captain Layard, have accomplished a daring journey across the wild regions of Central Asia. They traveled 3800 miles, a journey which took them nearly twelve months.

They started from Simla, India, in August, 1905, and traveled through Kashmir, reached Tibet through the mountain passes of 17,000 to 24,000 feet. Another British officer on a sporting expedition whom they met in the Maras-mikha Pass, was the last white man whom they saw for six months.

The travels were about in a desolate region south of the Kurn-Lun Mountains for six weeks without meeting a human being or seeing any signs of habitation. The crossing of the range was very difficult, the journey of thirty-five miles occupying five days.

An entirely new route was struck out across the great Gobi desert by the two Englishmen, who crossed it at an unfavorable season, their journey being probably the first ever attempted under the conditions.

Colonel Bruce and Captain Layard reached Peking safely, afterward proceeding to Wei-Hai-Wei, where they were welcomed by the British garrison.

At the pie eating contest six boys entered the race with their hands tied behind them. The first prize of $1 was won by Virgil Raper, the second prize of 50 cents by Ralph Bonney. Otis Donberg won the prize, a thoroughbred Jersey pig, for being the most popular bachelor in Garfield. Mr. Donberg is the agent for the Potlatch Lumber Company of this city.

WOMEN IN WRECK TEAR SKIRTS FOR BANDAGES

BROOKHAVEN, Miss., Oct. 6.—An extra Mississippi Central train was wrecked at midnight outside this place and one man, T. G. Moore of Hattiesburg, Mass., was killed and four seriously injured, while it is believed the body of a negro boy is under the wreckage. The wreck was due to the tracks being undermined by the heavy rain.

The train had been made up for the purpose of bringing the members of the opera company here which had been disabled and laid over at Prentiss. The women of the opera troupe went heroically to work to attend to the injured and tore up their skirts to make bandages.

BEGGAR GIVEN THREE MONTHS

Police Judge Issues Warning That No Clemency Will Be Given.

"I will say to you, as I have to all others of your ilk who have been before me, that the people of this city do not want you here, begging from house to house, and I am going to put you in a place where you will learn that begging will not be countenanced in Oakland. I also say this for the benefit of others who are doing the same thing, but who have not been arrested as yet. It is my desire and the wish of the people of Oakland that all men of your caliber be kept out of Oakland. I therefore sentence you to three months in the city prison."

This was the lecture given William Johnson, arrested for begging, by Police Judge Smith Saturday. Johnson pleaded guilty to the charge placed against him and asked for leniency from the court, claiming that he had lost all his property in the San Francisco fire and that he had been seriously injured while escaping from the burning city.

Johnson's story did not meet with Judge Smith's approval, and the sentence was then imposed. Johnson was found begging from house to house in the vicinity of Eighth and Alce streets. He did a rushing business, as his pockets were bulging with nickels. It is the desire of the police to round up all the beggars and suspicious characters found in this city and drastic measures will be resorted to to run them out of the city.

OFFICE TRIBUNE STAMPS COODS STAMPED

Books, Authors....
...And Other Literary Chat

By ADELAIDE SELL BAKER.

"The Fortune Hunter," by David Graham Phillips, (The Bobbs-Merrill Company) introduces the reader to social life on the east side, in New York. Mr. Phillips has chosen his types from among the German-American, whose study of simplicity of character and strict regard for honesty appears to have made strong appeal to the author. Speaking of the Young American shooters' hall at Terrace garden, he observes:

"It was one of those simple, entirely and genuinely gay entertainments that assemble the society of the real New York—the three and a half millions who work and play hard and live plainly and without pretense; whose ideals center about the health, and whose aspirations are to be rich with a competence early in the afternoon of life, thenceforth placidly to assist in the prosperity of their children and to have their youth over again in their grandchildren."

In this single paragraph can be found the key note of the story, regardless of individuals. The fortune hunter, of course, serves as a contrast. As needs must happen, in a recital of this kind, there can be no possible doubt of the writer's philosophy of life, which leads to the conclusion that it is more desirable to be born of the people than it is to spring from a family or high social standing, but lacking money or the inclination to do good, honest world's work.

The soldier of fortune, Carl Feuerstein, holds an unimportant position in the German theater stock company. He is described as "tall and slender, and with large handsome features." He dressed "fashionably," and walked with a swagger. "One had only to glance at him to know that he was offensive to many men and fascinating to many women."

Feuerstein was possessed of a natural repugnance for work, and was known among his acquaintances as a "dead beat." His special forte was borrowing and this he never failed to do when opportunity presented. He was an exaggerated specimen of mankind with a fondness for dramatic climaxes which influenced every act.

At the shooters' ball, he was introduced to a dark, handsome, strong-looking daughter of the people. She had coal-black hair that curled about a low forehead. Her eyes were dreamy and stormy. Her mouth was sweet, if a trifle pouting. "And who is she?" he asked.

"That's Hilda Reuner," replied Horowitz. "Her father has a dalliance in Avenue A. He's very rich—owns three flat houses. They must bring him in at least ten thousand net, not to speak of what he makes in the store. They're firm people, those Reuners, none kinder anywhere."

"A beautiful creature," said Feuerstein. "I'd like to meet her."

His desire is immediately gratified, and Hilda falls an easy victim. He promises to meet her on the following Sunday, when there is a concert in the "square."

Hilda, good girl that she is, assists her parents in caring for the store. She is betrothed to Otto Heilig, a stalwart, honest young fellow, but the actor appeals to the hitherto dormant romanticism of her nature, and Otto is relegated to a station quite outside the range of her affections.

Feuerstein's cheek is immeasurably, and he prevails upon Hilda to allow him to call at her home, whereupon he asks her father for her hand in marriage. Dreuner laughs at him, but Otto, whose love for Hilda is so strong that he would sacrifice anything for her happiness, intervenes in his rival's favor.

Hilda then engages herself to the fortune-hunter, whose financial affairs are in a bad way, he having been discharged from the theatrical company. About this time Feuerstein met Lena Gausser, the daughter of a rich brewer of the upper East side. Upon learning of her father's wealth, he immediately abandoned all thoughts of marrying Hilda, and within the short space of three days induced Lena to consent to a clandestine marriage. Gausser, upon learning of his daughter's action, took prompt steps to annul the contract. He employed lawyers and detectives. Feuerstein, meanwhile, was not idle. He too employed lawyers, not, however, with the object of regaining his wife, but to force Gausser to a financial settlement. Before this could be consummated, Gausser, through his detective, made the discovery that Feuerstein was already married, and had committed bigamy. Gausser, having political ambitions, did not care for publicity; therefore, the soldier of fortune was told to leave New York, never to return.

Hilda wondered at first why her lover did not come to her, but soon learned the truth through the Gausser. This was due to Otto, who, hearing that the breath of scandal had begun to assail Hilda, sought for the recent lover and discovered his treachery. For a while Hilda refused to be comforted, but soon began to recognize the intrinsic worth of Otto. Their happiness now seems assured, but fire destroys the young man's business, and he is left absolutely penniless. Hilda, true to her better self, rises to the emergency and borrows money of her father to help Otto. Their wedding day is at hand, when Feuerstein, disguised and unkempt, suddenly reappears before Hilda in her father's shop. While her attention is engaged with a customer, he seizes a sharp knife, which is lying on the table, about his person. There is a dramatic scene. Feuerstein pleads for love and forgiveness. When he discovers that it is too late, he is seized with a wild desire to kill both Hilda and himself. The girl fails to recognize his intentions, and as he advances toward her, the voice of Dreuner is heard in the hall. "You must go!" she cried, hastily retreating.

"Hilda," he pleaded rapidly, "there is something I must say to you. I cannot say it here. Come over to my room in the sitting-room. Just for a moment, Hilda. It might save my life. If not that, it certainly would make my death happier."

This appeal touches Hilda's heart. She goes to Melner's, and is about to go inside, but soon instinctively refrains from entering. Feuerstein, there, and after drinking himself to the requisite courageous pitch, ends his miserable life by sticking Hilda's knife into his throat. Hilda is suspected of the crime, and is brought before the police judge to answer for it. Sophie, a girl friend, and an admirer of Otto's, has played the part of spy. She it was who saw Hilda go to Melner's, a circumstance which she promptly reported to the police. In the courtroom another important witness is introduced—a waiter, who saw Feuerstein commit the fatal deed. Sophie also turns out to be an important witness.

Speaking of the Young American shooters' hall at Terrace garden, he observes:

"It was one of those simple, entirely and genuinely gay entertainments that assemble the society of the real New York—the three and a half millions who work and play hard and live plainly and without pretense; whose ideals center about the health, and whose aspirations are to be rich with a competence early in the afternoon of life, thenceforth placidly to assist in the prosperity of their children and to have their youth over again in their grandchildren."

In this single paragraph can be found the key note of the story, regardless of individuals. The fortune hunter, of course, serves as a contrast. As needs must happen, in a recital of this kind, there can be no possible doubt of the writer's philosophy of life, which leads to the conclusion that it is more desirable to be born of the people than it is to spring from a family or high social standing, but lacking money or the inclination to do good, honest world's work.

The soldier of fortune, Carl Feuerstein, holds an unimportant position in the German theater stock company. He is described as "tall and slender, and with large handsome features." He dressed "fashionably," and walked with a swagger. "One had only to glance at him to know that he was offensive to many men and fascinating to many women."

Feuerstein was possessed of a natural repugnance for work, and was known among his acquaintances as a "dead beat." His special forte was borrowing and this he never failed to do when opportunity presented. He was an exaggerated specimen of mankind with a fondness for dramatic climaxes which influenced every act.

At the shooters' ball, he was introduced to a dark, handsome, strong-looking daughter of the people. She had coal-black hair that curled about a low forehead. Her eyes were dreamy and stormy. Her mouth was sweet, if a trifle pouting. "And who is she?" he asked.

"That's Hilda Reuner," replied Horowitz. "Her father has a dalliance in Avenue A. He's very rich—owns three flat houses. They must bring him in at least ten thousand net, not to speak of what he makes in the store. They're firm people, those Reuners, none kinder anywhere."

"A beautiful creature," said Feuerstein. "I'd like to meet her."

His desire is immediately gratified, and Hilda falls an easy victim. He promises to meet her on the following Sunday, when there is a concert in the "square."

Hilda, good girl that she is, assists her parents in caring for the store. She is betrothed to Otto Heilig, a stalwart, honest young fellow, but the actor appeals to the hitherto dormant romanticism of her nature, and Otto is relegated to a station quite outside the range of her affections.

Feuerstein's cheek is immeasurably, and he prevails upon Hilda to allow him to call at her home, whereupon he asks her father for her hand in marriage. Dreuner laughs at him, but Otto, whose love for Hilda is so strong that he would sacrifice anything for her happiness, intervenes in his rival's favor.

Hilda then engages herself to the fortune-hunter, whose financial affairs are in a bad way, he having been discharged from the theatrical company. About this time Feuerstein met Lena Gausser, the daughter of a rich brewer of the upper East side. Upon learning of her father's wealth, he immediately abandoned all thoughts of marrying Hilda, and within the short space of three days induced Lena to consent to a clandestine marriage. Gausser, upon learning of his daughter's action, took prompt steps to annul the contract. He employed lawyers and detectives. Feuerstein, meanwhile, was not idle. He too employed lawyers, not, however, with the object of regaining his wife, but to force Gausser to a financial settlement. Before this could be consummated, Gausser, through his detective, made the discovery that Feuerstein was already married, and had committed bigamy. Gausser, having political ambitions, did not care for publicity; therefore, the soldier of fortune was told to leave New York, never to return.

Hilda wondered at first why her lover did not come to her, but soon learned the truth through the Gausser. This was due to Otto, who, hearing that the breath of scandal had begun to assail Hilda, sought for the recent lover and discovered his treachery. For a while Hilda refused to be comforted, but soon began to recognize the intrinsic worth of Otto. Their happiness now seems assured, but fire destroys the young man's business, and he is left absolutely penniless. Hilda, true to her better self, rises to the emergency and borrows money of her father to help Otto. Their wedding day is at hand, when Feuerstein, disguised and unkempt, suddenly reappears before Hilda in her father's shop. While her attention is engaged with a customer, he seizes a sharp knife, which is lying on the table, about his person. There is a dramatic scene. Feuerstein pleads for love and forgiveness. When he discovers that it is too late, he is seized with a wild desire to kill both Hilda and himself. The girl fails to recognize his intentions, and as he advances toward her, the voice of Dreuner is heard in the hall. "You must go!" she cried, hastily retreating.

"Hilda," he pleaded rapidly, "there is something I must say to you. I cannot say it here. Come over to my room in the sitting-room. Just for a moment, Hilda. It might save my life. If not that, it certainly would make my death happier."

This appeal touches Hilda's heart. She goes to Melner's, and is about to go inside, but soon instinctively refrains from entering. Feuerstein, there, and after drinking himself to the requisite courageous pitch, ends his miserable life by sticking Hilda's knife into his throat. Hilda is suspected of the crime, and is brought before the police judge to answer for it. Sophie, a girl friend, and an admirer of Otto's, has played the part of spy. She it was who saw Hilda go to Melner's, a circumstance which she promptly reported to the police. In the courtroom another important witness is introduced—a waiter, who saw Feuerstein commit the fatal deed. Sophie also turns out to be an important witness.

"The Fortune Hunter," by David Graham Phillips, (The Bobbs-Merrill Company) introduces the reader to social life on the east side, in New York. Mr. Phillips has chosen his types from among the German-American, whose study of simplicity of character and strict regard for honesty appears to have made strong appeal to the author. Speaking of the Young American shooters' hall at Terrace garden, he observes:

TAHITI.
By LLOYD OSBOURNE.
Over the rim of the world,
Sun in the dawn of day,
There lie for you and me
The Isles of Far Away.

Haute we back to find them?
It needs but you to say!
Make sail and lay our course
For the Isles of Far Away!

Lagoon and shore and bending palm,
Why must it be nay?
Youth and love are calling From the Isles of Far Away!

HOW AUTHOR'S WORK.
A New York literary critic says:
"There are almost as many methods of composition as there are authors. There is no particular method of work that produces the best result. One man I know paces the floor dictating to a stenographer and evolving the plot as he goes along. Then he works that material over two or three times before the story is finished. Other people say that they have to work out the story in their minds before they write at all. Some of them carefully write it all out in long hand, while the man of journalistic training usually typewrites his story himself. The people who write by hand are not so apt to rewrite; they usually only revise. Some work quickly, others slowly. A woman said to me the other day, when plying with the question as to how she did her work: 'The old-fashioned method is good enough for me; give me a pad and a pencil and I'll write the story somehow.'"

"It would be nice to formulate some theory of the relative greatness of authors based on the number of books each author produces, but I do not think it would be. The people who write most are not necessarily the best writers, nor is the contrary true. The majority of novelists put forth but one novel a year. Even the sale of a book is no criterion of its worth. A book that reaches a sale of ten thousand copies is considered a good seller. We know some of the most famous novels did not have a large sale until after the author's death. It is not possible to give any conclusion as to the best method of work, but it is interesting to note how different authors do their work."

MARK TWAIN'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.
I intend that this autobiography shall become a model for all future autobiographies when it is published, after my death, and I also intend that it shall be read and admired a good many centuries because of its form and method—a form and method whereby the past and the present are constantly brought face to face, resulting in a complete and lively fire up the interest all about like contact of flint with steel. Moreover, this autobiography of mine does not select from my life its showy episodes, but deals mainly in the common experiences which go to make up the life of the average human being, because these episodes are of a sort which is familiar with in his own life, and in which he sees his own life reflected and set down in print. The usual, conventional autobiography seems to particularly hunt out those occasions in his career when he came into contact with celebrated persons, whereas his contacts with the uncelebrated were just as interesting to him, and would be to his reader, and were vastly more numerous than his collisions with the famous. Howells, in his autobiography, after noon, and I told him the whole scheme of this autobiography and its apparently systemless system—only apparently systemless, for it is not really that. It is a deliberate system, and the law of the system is that I shall talk about the matter which for the moment interests me, and cast it aside and talk about something else the moment its interest for me is exhausted. It is a system which follows no charted course and is not going to follow any such course. It is a system which is a complete and purposed jumble—a course which begins nowhere, follows no specified route, and can never reach an end while I am alive, for the reason that if I should talk to the stenographer two hours a day for the next hundred years, I should still never be able to exhaust a tenth part of the things which have interested me in my lifetime. I told Howells that this autobiography of mine would live a couple of thousand years, without any effort, and would then take a fresh start and live the rest of the time.

He said he believed it would, and asked me if I meant to make a library of it.

I said that that was my design; but that, if I should live long enough, the set of volumes could not be contained merely in a city, it would require a State, and that there would not be any multi-bibliothecal alive, perhaps, at any time during its existence who would be able to buy a full set, except on the installment plan.

Howells applauded, and was full of praise and endorsement, which was wise in him and judicious. If he had manifested a different spirit, I would have thrown him out of the window. I like criticism, but it must be in my way. —From "Mark Twain's Autobiography" in the North American Review.

ANOTHER SENSATIONAL LACE CURTAIN SALE

The unprecedented success of our last curtain sale was the turning point in the history of our wonderful Lace Curtain Department. When the crowds came and wondered at the values, when they bought hundreds and hundreds of dollars' worth of curtains, when they said they'd never before seen such value giving, such assortments, such a sale, when they said all this we started to figure. And this is what we concluded:

IF a sale of curtains, bought locally, could bring such response, what would a sale of curtains bought in New York result in? What amount of business could we do if we sent a curtain man East to buy for a sale? What would the people think if we BEAT the value-giving records of this sensational first sale by fully 25 per cent? There's only one answer, one conclusion—such action would result in the greatest crowd bringing, the most remarkable, the most phenomenal sale of curtains ever held on the Pacific Coast.

SO, we sent a curtain man to New York—an exclusive buyer of curtains and rugs. His instructions were to search the factories of the East—to find and buy for us a line of curtains that, value for value, style for style, quality for quality, were way far ahead of any curtains ever shown in this city.

He succeeded.

He bought tens of thousands dollars' worth of goods. Curtains by the carload, whole outputs, complete sample stocks, immense quantities. And what was the result? What could be the result? A tremendous saving, bedrock, cold cash, hammered down prices, savings in half a dozen ways—and a stock of curtains, as great as any San Francisco store has ever shown, landed here in Oakland at just about 25 per cent less than any curtains were ever landed here before.

Now, these are FACTS, folks. This sale here tomorrow is going to live in the mercantile history of this city for years. These curtains are wonders for the money. The styles are magnificent. The patterns are grand—they're new—they're up to date—they're different. We haven't any old stock to work off—every curtain is a fresh, crisp novelty.

To our knowledge this is the biggest exclusive window display of lace curtains ever made in the State of California. We never heard of a line before necessitating a display of over 40 feet.

The curtain and drapery department has been rearranged to handle the crowds. Extra salesmen have been employed and more are wanted. Help will be transferred from all sections of the store to assist in this sale and every possible precaution will be taken to avoid a crush.

SOCIETY WOMEN WHO COST UNCLE SAM MILLIONS A YEAR

THEY STRIPPED HIM TO HIS SKIN AND THERE SURE ENOUGH WAS THE PLASTER.

Every fall the United States government loses millions of dollars in customs duties, not from professional smugglers, but from supposedly honest folks returning from their trips abroad. What Uncle Sam loses in the month of September there is of course no way of computing, says the Boston Herald, but that it represents a sum up in the millions anyone familiar with the workings of the custom house will tell you.

If the alternation lay with the government to check absolutely the professional smugglers or the depredations of American tourists, there is little doubt how it would choose. The professional is known and can be checked, or, if successful, steals but a few thousand at most, while the tourists number into the hundreds of thousands, and pilfer anywhere from $1 to $100 apiece.

It is neither the steerage passengers nor the second class passengers who furnish the trouble, but the first-class. Society ladies glory in smuggling in lace and jewels, not only for themselves, but their friends. Many even go so far as to gain a little spending money in this way. Although it is doubtless the element of danger that prompts them, it is too often the excuse as in bridge to cover up the naked fact that, after all, it is the money they wish.

The society girl who can work in several yards of priceless lace looks upon it as a work of art, but incidentally figures how much extra pocket money she has for her petty dissipation. No matter how much money they have, there are always little outside things which they do not wish to include in the allowance. Pawnshop keepers can tell you this, and often have occasion to deal with women who are supposed to have unlimited means.

And it is just these amateurs who resort to the old and worn-out tricks, long since discarded by the professionals. The professional aims at simplicity, while your amateur resorts to methods as melodramatic as any ever seen upon the stage. They will wind the lace about their bodies, tuck diamonds away in the heels of their shoes, conceal jewels in their hair, or cut away the center of books, when as a matter of fact such hiding places are to the inspectors the most obvious.

The women inspectors are probably shrewder than the men, understanding more thoroughly the fables of their sex, and so are much harder to beat. If a woman brought before them appears uneasy, and it is difficult for an amateur smuggler to appear otherwise when actually confronted with the possibilities of the penalty, they start with the premise that she is concealing something. Often they have but to take her one side and deliver a mild lecture. "Madame, you are suspected, but if you will even now declare what you have, you will save yourself the annoyance of a search and a possible arrest," is the way the matter is put. Ten to one this will work, but if it doesn't the search is complete enough in most cases to reveal the articles. It is the amateur against the professional, and, as in every such case, it is generally the amateur who loses. Doubtless even then the matter can be hushed up, but only after a thorough fight and a good many disagreeable hours.

PETTY SMUGGLERS THE WORST. It is not those, however, who come over with large amounts that worry the officials, but the smaller smugglers. If one has but a single stone or two, one can pass it easily and avoid suspicion. The detectives depend much more upon the self-consciousness of the amateur smuggler than they do upon the result of a search.

As a matter of fact, however, it is also at this time of the year that the professionals do their best. Depending upon the rush and hurry of the inspection offices at this time, they are often successful where ordinarily they would be detected. Perhaps they may have been in Europe a year buying up their goods in such small quantities as to throw off their trail, the sharp-eyed sleuths upon the other side, and then, coming back as ordinary trav-

There is scarcely a trick even with the fervid brain of the popular novelist which has not been used to defeat the United States government. The greatest temptation to the professionals, owing to their great value and small bulk, is diamonds. In spite of the vigilance of the detectives, thousands of dollars worth, as known from the sales, are passed in every year. Dogs are made to swallow them, pigeons to carry them, while in the case of Mrs. Olivia Yancey, arrested in New York, a Chinese pelican was used.

Mrs. Yancey bobbed up in the spring of 1890 as a passenger on the Steamship City of New York, of the Tanager line. She was a woman of 40, and very beautiful. She was accompanied on board by Mimbo, a Chinese servant boy, and Zip, her pet pelican. This bird had pink eyes, edged with a growth of scarlet, and a big, strong beak, under which hung a pouch capacious enough to encompass a shad. His white and brown plumage shone with cleanliness, and his orange-colored feet looked as though they had been manicured. His neck was encircled by a turquoise studded ring, fastened with a spring and attached to a jeweled band of fine gold. Mimbo used to lead the bird out on the deck for exercise, following his mistress. The two excited much attention.

On approaching Sandy Hook, Mimbo took the pelican to Mrs. Yancey's stateroom, and when the two came out again the pouch below Zip's beak hung low. The two went quickly ashore, the bird passing as admitted for breeding purposes. It was not until later, when a disagreement occurred on the disposition of the valuable diamonds with which the bird's pouch had been stuffed, that the story of how it was done leaked out.

EVEN SHOES ARE NOTED BY THE EAGLE-EYED INSPECTOR.

A SMUGGLER WITH PEARLS, RINGS, ETC., SEWED TO THE LINING OF HIS VEST.

The inspectors depend much for their clues upon what they learn of the passengers themselves, and their movements abroad. Today an unknown man, specially if he had in any way acted suspiciously, would find it difficult to pass with a large animal of any kind until after the brute had been kept in detention a few days. Time and again large dogs have been starved until the day before the arrival into port and then fed upon pieces of meat containing diamonds. They would greedily swallow the food whole, and with it the jewels.

USE OF CARRIER PIGEONS.

One of the shrewdest schemes discovered by a treasury agent was that developed by a New York syndicate. Arrangement were made with a dealer in carrier pigeons who was to train the birds to fly from the decks of ocean steamships to their cotes in the city. The idea was to go aboard an incoming steamer, fasten the stones from the smuggler, receive them about the birds' necks, and free them before port was made. How the scheme leaked out before it was used is one of the secrets of the department. The moment two or more men attempt to act in partnership the chances of their detection are always increased. It is the lone worker who is the most successful.

There was such a one who bothered the inspecting staff at the New York ports for years before he was finally detected. It was known, as well as anything can be known which is not proved absolutely, that this man was engaged in smuggling diamonds. Each trip that he made he was held up, and every article brought with him was investigated. He was always carefully searched, but to no avail. He offered no objection, and took it all good-naturedly. But shortly after he landed it would be learned that a large amount of precious stones, unaccounted for by the custom house receipts, were on the market.

So matters went on for months, and finally, just before he was about to sail again, the authorities received an anonymous letter coming from an alleged accomplice abroad. It was to the effect that he had been cheated by the smuggler, and wanted to get square. He said that the man had with him a large number of stones, and that they were concealed beneath a porous plaster upon his back. The smuggler's scheme was to pretend to have an acute pain whenever the plaster was touched, relying upon the humanity of the detectives not to disturb it. It was a happy group of officers who waited for the smuggler on that trip. They greeted him with the cheery assurance that they had got him this time.

They stripped him to his skin, and there, sure enough, was the plaster. The moment one of the detectives placed his hand upon it the man squirmed in pain.

"For heaven's sake let that alone," he cried. "I wrenched my back and haven't had a night's sleep all the way over."

"Is that so," chortled the detective, and gave the plaster a yank. Sure enough, beneath it were found the stones. The man was taken to headquarters and placed under arrest. But in a few hours the appraisers reported that their find consisted only of paste diamonds, and these, not being dutiable, the man was allowed to go. Asked for an explanation, he answered that they seemed so anxious to find something upon him that he had not had the heart to disappoint them.

That week the same old report came in—a large number of stones were for sale in the market. And it was only years later, when the smuggler finally was caught, the officers having left him untouched so long that he grew bold, that he admitted that he had written the letter himself, and had actually walked out of the building with a handbag filled with jewels which the inspectors, with their minds fixed upon the plaster, had neglected to open. Furthermore, the inspectors agreed with the judge to commute his sentence by one year if he explained how for so many years he had got by successfully. He accepted the terms and told.

Each time when he came over he engaged a return passage, securing the same stateroom. He always concealed the jewels here in a small hole in the wall, and so really came off the steamer with nothing in his possession.

But when he started back, his wife always came to the boat, and the two went down to the stateroom. Here he gave her the jewels, and she went ashore unchallenged to dispose of them.

CHINAMEN NEXT TO WOMEN.

Next to women, Chinamen are the most successful smugglers. They do not do so much of it in the east as in the west, and here all their efforts are devoted to opium. With the arrest of See Lick many of his methods for getting opium into Mexico free of duty came to light.

He posed at various times as a market gardener, a laundryman, the buying agent for a firm of Chinese merchants, a money-lender and a Christian missionary. All smuggled opium inside the cushions of a rameshackle old vegetable wagon, inside firecrackers, and once in the carcass of a 200-pound shark which he claimed to be bringing in as a delicacy for a Chinese feast. He packed the drug inside cabbages, within bales of hay, and in the flower pots of growing Chinese lilies.

He was of an inventive turn of mind and seldom used the same trick twice.

At an auction sale he once, to the great amusement of the crowd, bought two rusty old safes. He smiled knowingly, and said he guessed he could find even bigger fools than himself among some of his friends. One day he went joyfully to the railroad station and said with a grin that he had found his suckers. He had doubted his money, finding one victim in Tucson and the other in Phoenix. The safes were bundled up and shipped. Later it was learned that he had made $1500 on his purchase, for he had filled the old junk safes with opium, which had passed without even a suspicion.

Hollowed out logs, blocks of granite and artificial chunks of coal, made of wood and painted black have all from time to time been found to contain precious stones.

In the end these men always come to grief, for they become known as in the business, and so are closely watched. It is not even the cleverest of these who bother the detectives. But how in the world is one to detect a woman who brings over dresses not her own, but who claims them, as she has a right to do under the law? Many women help to pay their own dress-makers' bills by bringing over to their tailors upon every European trip a line of smart frocks for sale. It is the women of the land who bother Uncle Sam, and the very women of all others who should give the least trouble. And it is because they look on it all merely as a sort of gamble—like a good rub at bridge.

The Art of Proposing Marriage

Honestly, now did you like the way in which your lover and husband proposed to you? Didn't it leave something to be desired in the way of electric thrills and a sudden blaze of rose-light?

Confess, honey, no one will know. A woman who has been married three times certainly ought to know a few things about this auspicious moment, since she has had a fair sample, yet this thrice blessed woman declares that men have much to learn in this respect. Listen:

"An unconfessed grievance that every married woman has against her husband is the way he proposed to her," declares the wise matron. "She was probably glad enough to get him on any terms, but there is a difference between having the thing you wanted tendered you on a silver salver and having it thrown at you.

"Women crowd the theater to see the counterfeits of the romance they missed, yet how poorly even an actor generally does it!

"It is only once in a blue moon that you find a stage hero of the old stock company type who clutches the heroine to him in a way that loosens her back hair and makes every woman in the audience sit up with a gasp.

"Of the stage each man has his own individual system of love making, and reaches the critical point of proposing by his own route.

"One of the most popular is by way of the confessional. When a man begins to get sentimental he yearns to tell a girl all about his past life. He confesses his own sins to her, and those of his friends.

"Then he tells her that she is the only person who ever really understood his intense nature, and that he only needs her angel influence to enable him to lead the higher life.

"The really bashful man who has made a study of the subject always proposes suddenly, and when you least expect it. He doesn't waste a word in preliminary compliments, because he has screwed his courage up to the sticking point, and he dare not let a turn of it go.

"There is a silence, and then he catches his breath and takes the plunge, as if he were jumping into a sea of ice and didn't know and didn't care whether he ever came up again or not.

"A disappointing lover, but an eminently satisfactory husband, is the business type. You have been good friends, and he has confided to you that he is getting on in the grocery trade, and last month's sales were double those of the month before.

"Then one Sunday afternoon he steers you round to some new flats or cottages, and, after pointing out the plumbing is exposed and so forth, he says: 'I say, Mary, how would you like to live here and be my little housekeeper?' And if you have any sense you say 'Yes.'

"That night you may shed a few tears in the silence of your own room over the beauty of the romance you have missed, but you will never have to weep over bills you can't pay."

BRAINS ARE ESSENTIAL IN PIANO PLAYING

Brains are highly necessary in a pianist. This important fact is too often forgotten. Many of those who think Mr. Paderewski a dreamer and a weak-minded romanticist would be astonished, says the New York Sun, if they gained an intimate acquaintance with him and could enjoy his keen and subtle analysis of current world politics, literature and art. His is an active and far-reaching mind.

It is a mind eminently capable of composing refined and poetic interpretations of masterpieces.

It is not the technical skill that makes these men great. We are told often and effectively that it is the personality. Good; but what do people usually mean by "personality"? They are laboring under some curious delusion that when a pianist sits down to play his performance has one effect upon his hearers and his personality another, and that the personality makes us like the performance, even when the latter is not good. Either they mean that or they mean nothing.

For if the personality when put forward as a cause for the popularity of the artist is something apart from the performance, then it must operate in a way different from the performance. The truth is that the personality makes the performance.

Personality in musical interpretation is style, and style is the man. Teresa's Teresa is Teresa and Emma's Emma is Emma, and never the twain shall meet till earth and sky stand presently at God's great judgment seat. The difference between the

of a Teresa into the Teresa of an Emma. The Teresa of Teresa lives in and by and through the personality of Teresa, and the Teresa of Emma sleeps in and by and through the personality of Emma.

The personality of a pianist is to be discovered by his interpretations. If he has temperament and intellect he will raise the veil from the mysteries of Beethoven, Brahms, Schumann and Chopin and permit us to enter into the abiding place of master spirits. But if the personality of the player is so shallow that he can find nothing nobler in his art than a display of eccentricity, then those of us who know what music really is will be disappointed in him and his success a not come from the approval of those who look on anything better than music as a sort of gamble—like a good rub at bridge.

TRAINING THE FACE FOR CONQUEST.

EGYPTIAN AND MYSTERIOUS

The woman of today who would exercise the full limit of her charms must educate her features. It is not enough, says the Boston Herald, that she be young, pretty and know how to dress. Unless she is mistress of all the changing shades of countenance, she will fall short in attraction of another woman not so well equipped in the essentials, but who knows how to make a mirror of her face.

By the education of the features the plainest person may take on a certain amount of good looks, while a beautiful woman may become absolutely radiant.

The face is capable of an infinite variety of expressions. A good part of the art of the actor consists in knowing how to so dispose his features as to give them the varied expressions of grief, horror, amusement, whimsicality or affection.

Why the average pretty woman, so willing to go the limit in other directions to make herself more attractive, has permitted the fertile field of face education to be monopolized by the theatrical profession is a riddle.

The best things can be done with the eyes and the mouth. Not much is possible to the nose; that is fixed and rigid. It cannot be made to dimple, nor can a tilt be turned into classic

Grecian. As if to compensate for this, is the fact that almost any shade of expression can be thrown into the mouth and eyes.

The mouths of those who are sullen, morose or unhappy are nearly always turned down at the corner. Unconsciously they have in years of habit posed this expression till it has become habitual. By constant use of the muscles that pull down the corners of the mouth, a forbidding appearance has been imparted to a face that ought to be cheerful and happy.

The remedy for this is not to twist the mouth into a perpetual grin, for this is just as ugly as a fixed frown. But keep the lines of the mouth straight normally, so that the occasional smile may seem to spread sunshine over the whole face.

Regarding the eyes, it must be remembered that it is the lid of the orb, and not the eyeball, that gives expression. The eyeballs themselves are entirely devoid of any possibility of change, any more than a colored marble would be, but in the manner that the eyelids either drape or expose the eyeball is possible some of the most wonderful charms granted to the human face.

The brows also assist materially in this performance, and if a woman has only average good eyes, she can get wonderful effects from them merely by understanding just what set of muscular actions can produce at will the varied shades of affection, surprise, coyness, the roguish, the vivacious, coquettish, or appealing.

These muscles can be trained just as readily as those of the arm or leg, but not many women have had the wisdom or the energy to attempt the work. The method is easy, and no instructor is needed. The only equipment is always to be found in the bosom of any woman from queen to peasant, a mirror.

Seated in front of this the woman who aspires to train her features should let her face take on its various expressions. She can make them natural by thinking of some events that have especially pleased, and then indulging the expression that is evoked instinctively at the thought of pleasure.

In a short time she can discover just which of these expressions are most pleasing, and a woman needs no teacher to clear her mind on that point, for she is a keen critic, who can analyze with a surgeon's certainty. Once she has the right expressions she can exercise the muscles that produce them until at will she can make her face take on just what appearance she will.

When the more important expressions are secured then come the gradations, the lighter shades. All are entirely within the powers of any woman of average intelligence and reasonable persistency.

By the effect she produces with her new tricks of facial education, she can soon tell whether or not she is on the right track. By trying on various persons the expressions she has mastered, and by studying the reception they get, it is an easy matter to determine which are good and should be kept, and which are ineffective and ought to be discarded.

The human eye has been said by a famous French psychologist to be capable of conveying 87 different impressions, entirely without the use of the spoken word. When to this is added the additional suggestion of words, a little laugh and the possibilities of the mouth, it will be readily seen that the woman who has her face educated is equipped with a fine line of the sort of ammunition to chain a man's attention.

By studying the face of a bright child it is possible to obtain many valuable hints into the art of face expression. With the youngster it is all spontaneous. The features are the visual expression of what is in the little mind.

and mouth and eyes show unfailingly how the various emotions should be expressed. With the passing of time, the muscles stiffen, the face takes on a fixed look, and it is only by a constant and intelligent exercise that the charm of the features can be maintained.

Stories survive of how the ugliest of women have been able to hold their admirers long after they had passed youth. In great part this has been due to the infinite shades of expression that remained to the face.

The impulse of fear causes all the muscles of the face to become tense. The mouth and eyes open wide, the cheek muscles become lined and rigid and the forehead wrinkles. When suspicion is aroused and the woman seeks to divine the inner purposes of her foe, then everything contracts, the lips come together in a firm line, the forehead knits, and the eyelids coming down in two narrow lines come so closely to meeting that little of the white and only a small part of the pupil is exposed.

This is not an expression that most women would care to use as an addition to their charms, but it can be made very attractive used in jest when the conversation takes a turn that the fair listener wishes to pretend puzzles her.

Similarly good effect can be made with a slight expression of distrust. This is the result of looking out of the eyes sideways, turning the pupils toward the left, and slightly compressing the lips, though not so much as in the preceding expression.

Surprise is conveyed principally by the little muscles of the face, though the eyes opened wide, and the mouth, just partially opened, heighten the effect. Much can be done by a woman with the pretty use of the surprise expression. No way is more graceful in the acceptance of a gift than first to look surprised and then follow with a look of delight.

When a lady would look grieved at hearing the news that one of her admirers is going away, perhaps to break up a happy vacation, stay at some place where both have been, the sad-dened expression results from dropping the eyelids dejectedly over the pupils and etching the corners of the mouth turn down slightly.

Laughter and merriment can be best expressed by showing the teeth, insolence means to slightly upturn the nose and narrow the eyelids, contempt is a still further turning up of the nose and down of the expressive muscles in the corner of the mouth. In anger the veins swell and the face reddens. But no one wants to stimulate this emotion. It is never pretty, and is bad enough when it is real.

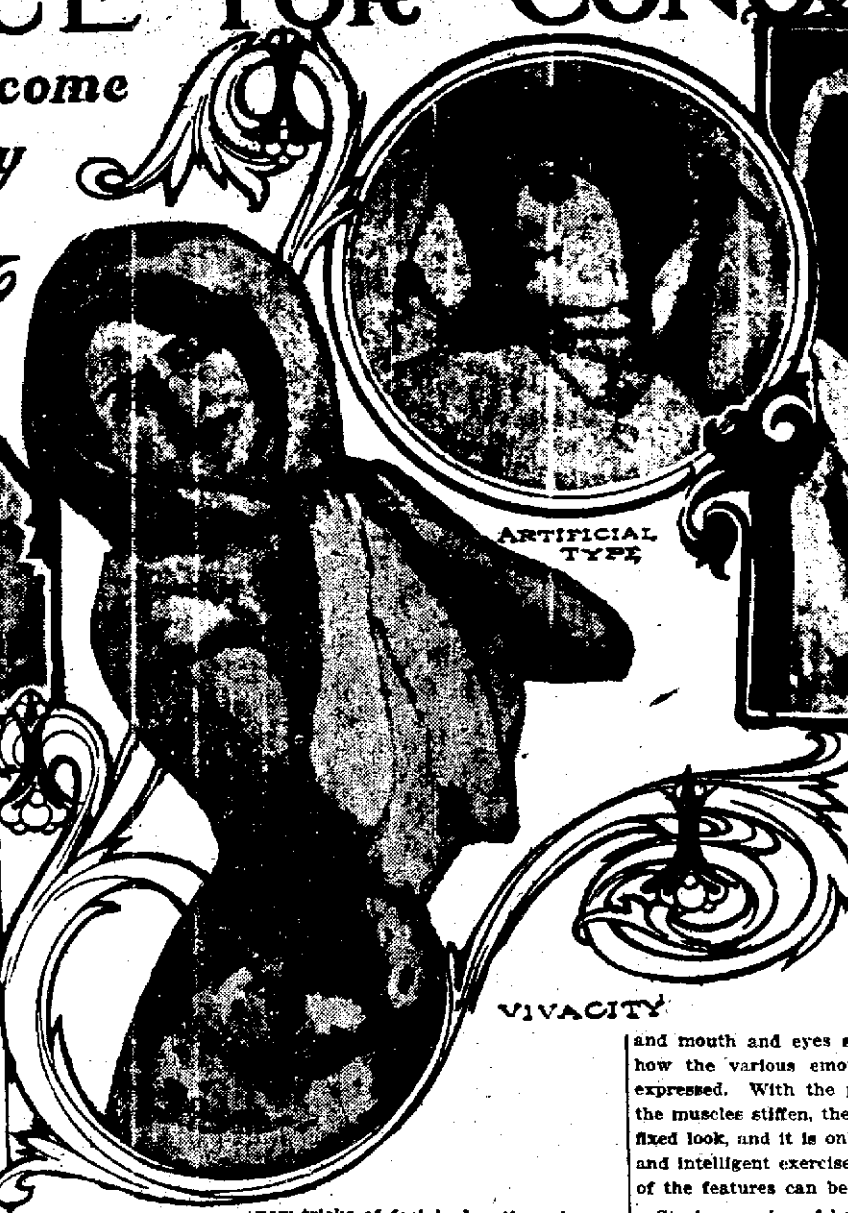

All the desirable expressions heretofore described can be acquired by any woman with a little practice, and she who becomes mistress of them will be surprised to see how much the art of conversation is facilitated by them.

MOST POPULAR DANCES OF THE VARIOUS NATIONS

See Illustration on First Page.

Dancing, according to M. Gabrielle, a famous French authority on the peoples of the earth, reveals better than language the character of the nations. More distinctive than speech, than social customs, than religious views, than anything else, are the dances of the different countries.

The dance reveals, according to M. Gabrielle, the temperament, the religion, the state of mental and physical development of a people. And, as he declares, every nation on the face of the earth, every tribe, every sect, every religion—except one—has its own peculiar form of dancing which distinguishes it from all others. The exception is found in India among the Veddas, a tribe to which the dance is unknown—and which likewise is without religion, without belief in a hereafter, or concern in the present.

That the dance, primarily, is religious in its nature is declared by Professor Gabrielle to be undoubted. Among the more civilized nations the dance has lost much of its religious meaning, while among the savage and semi-civilized tribes it still retains all its meaning, and the motions of the body are used to express a worship deeper than that expressed in song or in spoken words.

Gracefulness is, of course, the highest object of the dance among all the peoples, but their conceptions of what constitutes grace differ widely.

According to this student of dancing, who has witnessed tens of thousands of dances in all parts of the world, who has penetrated to the interior of Africa and the desolate mountains of western China, there are three dances, says the Chicago Tribune, that, to his way of thinking, are equal in beauty, in grace, and in the poetry of motion. These are the dances of the Japanese Mohammedans—especially the "love dance," in which only the younger women participate; the tarantella of Christian Italy; and the butterfly dance of Japan.

That dancing loses in poetry, in fire, in meaning as civilization increases is the belief of this student of the art. He declares that the modern dances of civilized nations, especially as expounded on the stage, are not only meaningless and lacking in the beauty of the original dance, but actually degenerate, and merely physical contortions that, while they may be rhythmic and graceful, are as inspired and as meaningless as the waddle of a duck.

Perhaps of all the dances of the world the fisher dance of the Hollanders is the grandest as a descriptive dance, and also it is one of the most graceful and rhythmic, although it lacks utterly the sensuous abandonment of the dances of the tropics and of oriental nations. This dance, according to Professor Gabrielle, is a survival of the dance given in honor of the safe return of the fisher folk who made Holland famous, and the male dancer, whether or not he knows it, is impersonating the returned fisherman meeting his spouse.

The Javanese love dance is, according to this authority, the most graceful in all the world, uniting its pulsing, sensuous rhythm with utter abandon and perfect physical grace. The women of Java are not beautiful, but in their bodies is expressed, according to this authority, the most perfect grace the world has known, a grace which makes the Egyptian seem awkward, and the Parisian danseuse lacking in grace.

Of dances for men the palm is given to the highland fling and to the sword dance, the two virile, masculine dances of the Highlands of Scotland. Next to these the authority on dancing awards the palm to the Fajuela, a tribe of equatorial negroes, who, in their funeral dances, he declares, reveal more dignified grace and stateliness than any other peoples of the earth. And third in rank for courtliness, for grace, for meaning, he places the beautiful "Sir Roger de Coverley," as danced by the dames and men of America and of England—when these people, according to Gabrielle, danced instead of romped.

One would think that a Frenchman would award the palm for grace and for skill in dancing to his own people—at least to the women of his native land—but he does not, and, indeed, places the Italians, the Swedes, the Spanish, and the Arab dancing women above those of France.

The meaningful dances of the Swedish people, he says equal those of all northern peoples, and are rivaled only by the wonderful dances of the Tyrol, and, strange to say, he traces a great likeness to the Finnish, Swedish, and Norwegian national dances in the dances of the North American Indians.

M. Gabrielle spent nearly two years among the Indians of America studying their dances to see if he could discover from their gyrations a clue to their origin, and he found among the Pueblos forms which convince him that their religious dances were of Chinese, or at least of oriental origin, while he firmly was convinced that the Apaches derived their war dances, their sun dances, and other ceremonial dances from Asiatic forms. Among the northern Indians he declares he found semblance to Icelandic—and therefore Norse dances—and traces of old Jewish ceremonial dances, especially in their council lodge dances.

ESKIMO DANCERS. The ancient dance of the Eskimo was a chief feature of their festivals. The natives formed in a group, in the center of which stood the chief performer. He sang a weird song, beating time on a drum, gesticulating and dancing like a madman. Sometimes the song was meant merely for the entertainment of the company, who held hands and circled around him like children do when they play "Frog in the Meadow." But generally the song and dance had a ceremonial, if not a religious, significance. The man in the center chanted a satirical "nith song" against another Eskimo, who made significant responses.

Perhaps the strangest of dances is that of the wild Hairy Ainu, the mountain savages of Japan. In one of their few public semi-religious festivals the girls put on long yellow gowns painted with rude spots of white and red, and with a mottled blue cloth slung over their backs. The significance of this peculiar garment has not been revealed to travelers who have seen their dances.

Two little children are placed in the center of a cleared circle, and the oddly dressed Ainu girls go around and around, calling out certain words repeatedly and hopping always on one foot. The dance, in a slight way, is said to resemble the "Sir Roger de Coverley," and, though it is uncouth and barbarous to a degree, it is not without a certain wild beauty.

they are familiar. The dance probably is an incantation to the spirits of the forests and hills.

The performance is commenced by the beating of a drum made of a skin stretched over a section of a hollow log. The music is continued for about five minutes. Then, to a simple one-two time, a man gravely advances and begins to dance. He hardly moves his feet, but jerks his body to and fro and gesticulates with his hands. He makes a courtesy at each one-two beat of the drum. Often he is joined by another man, and they bow to each other and call the names of the familiar features of the landscape. They keep this up for an hour or more, and when they are exhausted they take seats upon a log or stone and chant drowsily to the music of the drum.

By this time the women are ready to carry out their part of the program. A bamboo flute sounds the drum, and the air becomes lively with simple variations of the one-two time. The women clap their hands and go through certain evolutions, not without grace. They curtsy to one another and to the men, and seem to be happy.

WEDDINGS AND WEALTH OF THE KRUPP SISTERS

The weddings of Barbara and Bertha Krupp will take place at the same time. The engagements were announced almost simultaneously. First came the statement that Miss Bertha would wed Baron Gustave Bohnen von Hohenbach, first secretary of the Legation to the Vatican. Scarcely had the surprise over this announcement died out before it was followed with the news that Miss Barbara had plighted her troth to Tito V. Wilmowski, no more generously endowed in this world's goods than his future brother-in-law.

Germany has had no bigger sensation in years. The wedding of either of these girls to a poor man would have been a matter of comment, for the Krupps are almost proteges of the emperor. The stern military spirit of the Kaiser always went out in admiration to the head of the house that has turned out Germany's best machinery of war, and it was his thought to marry the daughters of the late Frederick Albert Krupp to some of the biggest men in the realm, preferably distinguished members of the army.

Miss Bertha is the older of the two girls, and it has been said that she is the wealthiest maiden in the world. On the death of her father she came into the major share of the estate, and although she is barely of age, she rules the immense plant which employs about 40,000 men, and gives the town of Essen a population of 200,000.

Candidates noble and wealthy have swarmed to the Krupp mansion with one or the other of the daughters for a magnet, but neither girl would listen to any of the aspirants till Von Hohenbach and Wilmowski appeared. The love story of the baron and the "queen of Essen," as she is often called, began at Rome in 1904. While attending to his duties at the legation Bohnen met the lovely Miss Krupp, who was spending the winter in the Eternal City.

The baron extended the courtesies that would be expected of a diplomat to a lady of first importance in his own country. There was much that was creditable in his record. He could trace his family back to the twelfth century, his father had been minister to The Hague, and through a long test at Lausanne, Strassburg and Heidelberg, Bohnen had showed himself to be a man of ability. His advancement in the army has been rapid. He began in the Second Baden dragoon regiment 1, and later entered the Baden State service. From there he jumped to the staff of the German foreign office, becoming in 1899 one of the secretaries of the Imperial German legation in Washington, and in 1903 he served in a similar capacity in Peking.

Then he was promoted to the office of first secretary of the Prussian legation to the Vatican. This was promotion, and rapid promotion, with apparently still better things awaiting him, but it was not money. However, on the other hand, democratic ways of living had always marked the Krupps, and despite all her millions, Miss Bertha lived very modestly in her Villa Hugel. Society appealed little to her, and she refused the social prestige that the friendship of the emperor and empress would win her in Berlin, and chose rather to stay in Essen, where she could look after the great enterprise her father left. There was plenty to hold her attention, for the plant, modified begun in 1813 by Edward Krupp, has expanded to a point where it is a city in itself.

The statistics of the works, given in totals, are astonishing. The Essen plant, which has an area of 590 acres, burns 1,700,000 tons of coal a year. There are in use 5300 machine tools, 22 rolling mills, 141 steam hammers, 63 hydraulic presses, two of them bending pieces of 7000 tons each, and 191 cranes of varying power. There are 50 miles of normal gauge railway, 27 locomotives and 1209 cars, a telegraph system of 31 stations, 61 miles of wire, exchanging 200,000 messages annually with the Imperial telegraph at Essen, and telephone system of 224 miles of wire.

At Mitten is the proving ground. It is 14 1/2 miles long and three miles wide. The Krupp plant has American connections, and the Krupp family has been in the management of the Krupp plant since 1813.

wide. There nearly 25,000 shots are fired each year to test projectiles and armor, for both are made at Essen. The other groups comprising the works are equally extensive. This vast enterprise yielded Miss Krupp an income of five million dollars a year, but this huge sum did not make her less sensitive to Cupid's dart than a girl who works in a mill. The baron had won a way into her affections, and she deftly let him understand that it was not her plan to permit wealth to stand as a barrier between them.

With this encouraging information gained, Bohnen quickly pressed his suit and was accepted.

It is understood that he will quit the diplomatic service in order to assist in the management of the Krupp plant. The baron has American connections, and the Krupp family has been in the management of the Krupp plant since 1813.

he was here in Washington as a representative of his government. General W. H. C. Bohnen, who was killed at Bull Run, was a first cousin of the late John Bohnen, father of Francis H. Bohnen, Robert M. Bohnen and D. Murray Bohnen of Philadelphia.

Miss Barbara Krupp did not wait long after her sister to make the announcement that a second appointment was in store for the fortunate hunter who had been cherishing the first delusion that they might come into the Krupp money. Barbara has only about one-half as much money as Bertha, for when Krupp died he split his fortune one-half to Bertha and one-half to be divided between his widow and Barbara, but as he left $40,000,000 it will be some time before she will be able to keep the vast sum.

HEROIC DEEDS OF THE SUMMER GIRL.

Which is the braver—man or woman?

This is a question that nobody can answer, says the New York World, for the simple reason that it is impossible to tell to what degree of heroism either will go when occasion demands.

A little girl of five, who under ordinary conditions would scream at the sight of a tiny flame, will dash through a conflagration to save the life of a baby brother who has fallen into the blaze. A young woman daintily clad and afraid in her normal moods to go into the water without holding to the lifeline, will, forgetting self entirely, plunge into the stormy flood to rescue a drowning person as quickly as the trained life-saver.

Compared individually with members of the opposite sex, women today stand forth ahead. For instance, the summer girl and the summer man, classed together in ordinary affairs, are far apart when it comes to matters of heroism. It is the summer girl who shows "the real stuff" when it comes to a pinch.

All summer long there have been young women who have performed deeds of splendid daring. Many of them have not been reported in public print.

This attribute of bravery on the part of our women is not new. This summer's exhibitions of it are only new. And it is only meet that the story of some of them should be told again.

When young Earl Buckley fell from the pier into the sea at Island Heights, N. J., only Mrs. A. Floyd Campbell heard his cry. She screamed for help. Then, as she saw the lad rise and sink out of sight again, she plunged into the water. She was fully clothed and swam with difficulty. There was still enough life in the boy when she reached him and enough of desperate terror to make him very dangerous. He grabbed Mrs. Campbell, and with arms around her neck and legs twined about her body, clung with a death-grip.

Then came a frantic struggle for life. She struck the boy in the face and tried to choke him. His weight and her heavy clothing bore them under the surface. When they rose again she put forth all her strength to drag their weight nearer the shore, where the shallows would give her a foothold. Her efforts were successful, and thus she brought the boy to land, and together they fell on the beach, exhausted.

At Lake Hopatcong Miss Edna Hartman saved the lives of four drowning persons on as many occasions. Miss Hartman is only eighteen years old, very pretty and a splendid swimmer. Another heroine of Lake Hopatcong is Miss Effie Field, of Rutherford, N. Y., who plunged into the water in her Sunday finery and rescued Walter Hutchinson, a twelve year old boy, in the nick of time.

Mrs. Frederick G. Ware has just added another rescue to the fourteen she has made in the nine years that she has lived near the canal at Ansonia, Conn. She has saved six boys, four girls, three women and two men from drowning. Her latest rescue, and one of the most difficult, was that of Mrs. Charles Cahill, who fell into the canal where the water was twelve feet deep. Mrs. Ware leaped

In after her, fully dressed, and after a hard struggle in the presence of several men who were too frightened to give aid, brought the unconscious woman to shore.

Then there was the brave rescue by Mrs. Frederick E. Crane, of Brooklyn, of her ten year old daughter and the latter's girl playmate, who together fell off a pier into deep water at Saybrook, N. J. She went in after them. Encumbered by her heavy clothing, she performed a great feat of physical prowess in bringing the two girls safely to land, where she herself sank exhausted from the shock and strain.

And not least among the water heroines is Miss Mamie Sheehan, of New York, who a few weeks ago plunged into the Navesink river and saved the life of James Edward Connolly, a retired merchant of Washington, and personal friend of President Roosevelt. Miss Sheehan swam a long distance to reach Mr. Connolly, who had fallen into the water from a canoe and could not swim. With consummate skill she brought him safely to land.

Miss Florence Bowen, a pretty Chelsea girl, saved the life of her six year old nephew when they were well out at sea. The little lad fell out of the boat in which the two were rowing, and sank. When the child came to the surface he was some distance from the boat, and Miss Bowen saw there was not a moment to lose. She sprang into the water and swam to the youngster. She got a firm hold of him and pulled him back to the side of the boat.

And this brave deed was equalled, if not surpassed, by the achievement of little Mary Edick, age eleven, granddaughter of United States Commissioner Shields. In saving the life of her playmate, Tommy Williams, age ten. It was in the Hudson river, off Grand View. Tommy had swam out into the river a long distance—much longer than he had ever attempted before—and then discovered, out there all alone, that his strength was failing. That discovery brought panic, and, with a scream for help he sank. At first Mary, watching his pranks from the shore, thought he was still playing. When he rose to the surface only the back of his head showed, and again he disappeared. Instantly Mary dove from the pier and swam with all her strength toward the ripples. As Tommy came up she seized him by the hair. Holding him at arm's length and swimming "sailor fashion" with the other hand, she made for the shore, crying for help. Mr. Edick heard her calls and helped her at the shore to take the unconscious boy from the water and to restore him to life.

The summer's deeds of the girl hero include the capture of many burglars. The record of her accomplishments in this line have made many a pretty story. Mrs. Esther Evans, the plucky little landlady at the New York apartment house No. 128 West Twenty-ninth street, captured since June 29 seven burglars and turned them over to the police.

Then there was Mrs. Margaret Hayes, who found a man ransacking the rooms of a boarder at No. 907 East One Hundred and Sixty-fifth street. "What are you doing here?" she asked him. "I'm looking for a girl," he said. "What is that in your hand?" she asked pointing to a gold watch. He dropped it and tried to push past Mrs. Hayes. Instantly she grabbed him by the throat. In the struggle the fellow dropped a "Jimmy." Her calls brought aid, and the burglar was arrested.

But the interest always comes back most strongly to the woman who rushes voluntarily into danger to save the lives of others. Near Cedar Grove, N. J., a horse attached to a light runabout became frightened at a passing auto and dashed at high speed along the turnpike. In the carriage were two girls, and in her fright the one who was driving dropped the reins. The horse was on a dead run when it approached a field in which Miss Pauline Weiss was picking daisies. The two girls were clinging to each other and crying out in terror. Miss Weiss dropped her apron, half filled with flowers, vaulted over the four-rail fence and ran to the middle of the road. She seized the bridle of the horse as it got abreast of her, and held on, swaying back and forth and sawing on the bit, for more than a hundred yards.

Quite similar to this was the daring act of Mrs. George Corwin, of Stamford. She seized the bit of a frantic horse dashing toward a crowd in the main street of Bridgeport, and by her courage and presence of mind undoubtedly saved the lives or limbs of more than one person.

Miss Annie Barney hesitated not a moment to risk a horrible death under the wheels of a Pennsylvania Railway train at Elizabeth, N. J., to save the life of two-year-old Edward Copeland, who had wandered to the track. The speeding locomotive was almost on him when Miss Barney climbed up the steep embankment seized the child and drew him out of danger.

The terror that a mad dog inspires in the mind of a young woman did not cause Miss Anna Winters, seventeen years old, to hesitate when the moment came to do a brave act. At her home in Prescott street, Jersey City, a mongrel dog which had been in the family for half a dozen years suddenly went mad on one of the recent hot days. It pursued Anna's five year old brother Harry into the room in which she was sitting and had sprung upon the boy to bite him. Instantly the girl rushed to the child's assistance, drew the dog to herself, and a fierce fight for life ensued. The girl got her hands around the beast's neck and clung and choked him with a desperate grip. She held on until she had strangled him to death.

The summer has produced many little girl heroines. The prompt and brave action of eleven year old Fannie Haskowitz, of No. 91 Hopkins street, Brooklyn, saved the life of her four year old sister, Julia. The children were crossing the street, when a Summer avenue car bore down on them. Fannie had crossed safely, when she saw Julia knocked down by the fender of the car and carried beneath it to the swiftly moving wheels. Fannie was instantly down at her little sister's side, dragging her forward and out until she had pulled her away from the wheels. Julia fainted, and when the ambulance came it was found that one of her legs was broken, but her little-mother sister had saved her life.

A still younger heroine is Madeline Spinello, of New Haven, who rescued a little boy playmate who was drowning in the river.

And think of Rena Elson, five years old, who walked into a fire in the street near her home at Battle Creek, Mich., and dragged her three year old sister from the flames. The brave deed was done with a cool deliberation not often found in older persons on similar occasions. She did not call out when she saw the danger to her little sister. "Because she was afraid she would scare her to go further into the fire." The baby was scarcely injured, while the little heroine was severely burned about the face and chest.

Another "little mother" of five years, Hannah Lavin, of No. 774 East One Hundred and Fifty-seventh street, was left alone to care for her two baby brothers while the real mother went to market. When Mrs. Lavin returned there were fire engines and an excited crowd in front of the house and smoke was pouring from the windows of her flat. She swooned in attempting to make her way through the halls, suffocating with smoke, to the third floor, where she had left her children. But meanwhile little Hannah had worked her way out of the burning flat, little three year old Joe clinging to her skirts and the one year old baby in her arms, covered with an old shawl to shut out the sight and suffocating smell of the smoke. Willing hands were ready at the last flight of stairs to help the little heroine and her charges.

STURDY FISHWIVES.

ON THE SCOTTISH COAST

There is not a man to be seen among them away, and later the Irish coast the fisher people of New Haven, writes an Edinburgh correspondent of the themselves, 300 strong. It is but a ten-minute ride, by electric car, from Edinburgh along the coast of England has drawnburgh to the little fishing hamlet.

From the top deck on a car I looked down yesterday morning into a succession of pretty flower gardens; a turn of the road and the beautiful North Forth came into view, the morning sun glinting its water like new steel. Earlier, with the tide, came in a fleet of fishing smacks laden with big catches. The fishwives then took hold, counting and assorting the fish into baskets for another set of women to convey to the city, and sell from door to door.

They are a hardy race of women, faces brown as leather, and they wear a smart as well as quaint style of dress. It is a striped cotton skirt, almost short as a ballet dancer's; loose bodice with short sleeves, black woolen stockings and low shoes. With this is worn a dark, blue cloth cloak, which reaches a little below the skirt. The older women wear a white cotton peaked cap and the younger ones head-shawls of lightweight Paisley.

The fish are carried in a large, brown-red basket, supported upon another of deeper make. A strong broad band attached to the basket is drawn over the head and the basket is steadied with the hands. These women give a touch of quaintness to Edinburgh streets, but hardly a feminine one; there is too much of the beast of burden aspect. The borough of Leith, where the hamlet lies, is steadily improving the homes of the fishermen, while retaining as much as possible the characteristic picturesqueness of the place. Recently, a covered market building was erected, much to the women's comfort, as Scotland seems to have a downpour of rain almost every third day.

PENNSYLVANIA'S NEW STATE CAPITOL

Pennsylvania reaps the first fruits of reform in its magnificent new State capitol, and incidentally the nation at large is furnished an object lesson of how the grafters are halted when it is known that an aroused people is going to hold them strictly to account.

The splendid new capitol has been constructed within the appropriation. It is built of the best material, and money has not been spared in the beautiful decorations. Moreover, in place of having to ask for extra money to finish the building, the contractors left a balance of $30,000, which the commission in charge has just turned back into the State treasury.

In their determination to make the new building the very best that could be had, the architects influenced the commission to reconsider the decision to build it of South Carolina granite and to use stone from Vermont. The contract for the building was given to George F. Payne & Co. of Philadelphia, the firm receiving in the aggregate $3,505,656.

The length of the capitol is 525 feet; breadth, 254 feet; height to the dome, 292 feet. There are 36,275 square feet of space covered. Among the notable features of the architecture are 25 magnificent monoliths, weighing 33 tons each.

Three hundred thousand dollars had been specified for seating and 25,000 for mural decorations. The money was applied to this purpose with gratifying success, and none of those experts who have gone over the building have found any cause for complaint in what is usually a most fertile inspirer of criticism.

The new capitol was dedicated last Thursday with most elaborate ceremonies.

CONSTRUCTION OF A PERFECT HANGING SKIRT

To insure a perfect hanging skirt finish the top of the skirt, put it on the one who is to wear it; now put on a stiff belt directly over the band; have it tight enough so it cannot sag. Take a strip of cloth or stiff paper longer than you want your skirt, loop it over the belt and fasten; have loose enough so it will slip on the belt. Now make the strip the desired length of the skirt, slip this around on the belt, putting pins in the skirt at the end of the strip, not more than six inches apart. Take the skirt off, turn the hem by your pins and baste. Now take a piece of paste-board the desired width of the hem, measuring every few inches. Baste again and stitch. Your skirt will be same length all around.

WHEN MEN WORE BUSTLES

"Bustles were ridiculous," said an antiquary. "Do you remember the bustle of 1855? It shot straight out from the waist; a broad seat on which the bustle was supported, and the skirt was draped over it." The bustle was a ridiculous thing, and the skirt was draped over it.

CHECKED MOHAIR FOR SAILOR SUITS

Checked mohair will be smart for tailored street suits this fall. The checks in pretty color combinations will probably be more popular than the plain colors have been all summer, because of the novelty of the material. Then, too, frocks made of it shed dust and have such exceptional wearing qualities that they are particularly serviceable for use during the early and late fall.

A mohair suit in rich bronze green checked with tan would be attractive made with a sun-pleated skirt that just escapes the ground, and a jaunty double-breasted blouse with large bronze buttons fastenings that meet below chemise of ecru all-over embroidery. The wide collar which extends to the bust line in the form of peters is of ecru linen in-set with millions of Irish crochet dyed to the exact shade of the linen. Use is made of this lace in-set linen in the turn-back cuffs of the three-quarter length sleeves finished with double fringe of narrow ecru-crocheted Valenciennes lace. The

"SILENT" SMITH CAUGHT BY GRASS WIDOW

DRIVING HIS SHAFT TURN-OUT AT THE HEAD OF
THE COACHING PARADE

Out of his shell! James Henry Smith, millionaire bachelor, has been roped and dragged forth at last.

For ever so many years New York's 400—or more—have debated when it would really happen, have wondered who would be the winner of the extraordinary contest in which figured this odorous "catch," who has so long puzzled and baffled the most ingenious match-making mammas.

Now the secret is out—and so is "Silent" Smith.

The heroine of the adventure is as well known to New York, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer, as "Silent" Smith himself. She was Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart.

Over and over again this and that society girl has been named as the future Mrs. Smith. So often was this false alarm sounded that society became justly incredulous. It was not true that the present Mrs. Frederic Gebhard was to marry Mr. Smith. Neither was the same thing true of Mrs. Samuel Sloan Chauncey, Miss Greta Pomeroy or of Miss Cornelia Byrce. His sister, Lady Cooper, baited her books with coronets in England and Scotland, but the great trout took only a languid interest in them.

THE HERMIT LIFE FOR "SILENT" SMITH.

James Henry Smith has been known space was covered with books, and books lay in stacks upon the floor and upon the tables. They were fine books, rare editions, beautifully bound, and they seemed to be the only joy in Mr. Smith's life, almost his only companions.

There were also in the rooms many clothes, cut by the best tailors, bearing the marks of the haberdashers. For "Silent" Smith was almost a "dude" in dress. No one ever saw him with a soiled glove, a hat that did not look new, or trousers that had a sign of bar at the knee or in a coat that was not perfectly cut. There was about his attire that quiet elegance which is the distinguishing mark of the gentleman.

He scarcely ever said a dozen words to his valet, and no one else in the apartment house had ever exchanged a word with him. Most of the other tenants did not even know his name. And yet he was worth two or three millions, and was perspective heir to fifty millions more. His social position was anything he liked to make it, and this was—nothing. In short, so far as the world was concerned, he did not exist.

One day in 1889 the cables brought the news that George Smith had died suddenly at the age of ninety-one, at the Reform Club in London, leaving an brother left two children, James Henry Smith and the wife of Sir George Cooper. The nephew had for many years been in charge of the uncle's American investments and the old man used to say that James was a chip off the old block.

FALLS HEIR TO $56,000,000.

When George Smith's will was read it was found he had remembered several of his old associates in the west with legacies ranging up to $50,000; that he had provided handsomely for Lady Cooper, his niece, and that all the rest of his fortune was left to the nephew. The exact amount of this fortune was established when the chancellor of the exchequer told the British parliament that he had collected $4,500 inheritance tax upon it; the rate in England is 8 per cent, which gives a total of about $56,000,000.

The leaders of New York society began to make inquiries about this man who had been all his life among them but never of them. The wives of the members of the Union and other clubs urged their husbands to cultivate his acquaintance. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish took him up, urged him into society, introduced him to all the eligible girls. He rented 6 W. 52d street and gave up his bachelor apartments. Frank Underhill taught him to drive four-in-hand. Mrs. George Keppel launched him into English society.

Then began the assiduous angling upon the part of the mothers of marriageable girls. "Silent" Smith gave society an agreeable shock when he sent out invitations to a Valentine ball at

to the general public for only about seven years. It was in 1899 that the world discovered what an enormous trout had been basking silently in the shadows of the deep pool. Before that date he had been known to a few of his associates in Wall street and a few of his friends in the Union Club, but the general public and New York society had never heard of him. "Silent" Smith's acquaintances called him "Silent" from his taciturn disposition, his hermitlike seclusion, his Laconian brevity of speech.

At 10 Wall street there was an office with "Geddes & Smith, Brokers," upon the door. A white-haired and discreet bookkeeper, C. T. Robinson by name, was always there, and there Mr. Smith spent his working hours. The firm did a conservative, legitimate business, but was never heard of in the big affairs of the street.

At 1 West Thirtieth street The Wilbraham was a small flat where "Silent" Smith lived alone, with a valet to keep things in order. No friends called at these rooms; the sound of conversation and music was never heard from the apartments; their proprietor came out and went, silently and alone, except for a daily hour at the Union Club he spent almost all his time, outside of business hours alone in the flat, for which he paid $1100 a year. A few old portraits hung upon the walls, among them one of a stern-faced old Scotchman named George Smith, James Henry's uncle. All the rest of the wall estate of more than $50,000,000, the greater part of it to James Henry Smith of New York. The newspapers had no difficulty in writing the obituary of George Smith, for his was a familiar figure in American history, but they had never heard of James Henry Smith, who thus became one of the richest bachelors in the world.

George Smith was born in Scotland in 1805. He spent two years in Aberdeen University studying medicine, but his eyesight failed and he turned to farming. In 1834 he came to America and settled in Chicago, bought many acres of land where Milwaukee now stands and sold it at a profit two years later, the price being one-fourth cash, the balance in notes.

He returned to Scotland, but the financial depression of 1837 brought him back to reclaim his lands. In that year he founded the Wisconsin Fire and Marine Insurance Company and issued certificates which for years passed current all over the Northwest as cash. He founded the first bank in Chicago and invested heavily in real estate; he also backed many of the pioneer railroads in the northwest and held on to the capital stock and bonds which he thus acquired.

In 1861 he went to London, where he passed the rest of his life, spending only $2500 a year and watching his American investments grow more and more valuable. He had no mercy on any man who owed him anything; he never renewed a note.

George Smith never married. His Sherry's in 1901. There were 132 guests. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. received with him; the cotillion favors were dainty and expensive; the whole ball was in perfect taste.

It was here that many members of the most exclusive society set first met James Henry Smith. They found him a man of a little over forty, more than six feet tall, with sparkling blue eyes behind large spectacles; thick, wavy, grayish hair, and a heavy moustache, turning gray; quiet, reserved, graceful and courteous. Among those whom James Henry Smith met in these early days of his social career were Mr. and Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart. Mr. Stewart was a quiet, religious man, who devoted his great wealth and much of his time to charitable work. He had been president of the State board of charities; he had taught Commodore Gerry's management of the S. P. C. C.; he had been active in support of the demand for the removal of Supt. Brockway for cruelty in managing the Elmira reformatory. He cared nothing for society. Mrs. Stewart was a beautiful and vivacious little woman, who had been called the most patrician looking woman in New York. She was a daughter of Gen. Armstrong of Baltimore, a sister of Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, a member of the Colonial Dames and very fond of society. The Stewarts and Mr. Smith became close friends.

In March, 1902, he was with them at Palm Beach, and there he rented the Drexel yacht Marguerite and took a party for a European trip. The first lowing summer the trip was repeated. Mrs. Stewart and her daughter were his guests at Dunbarton, his place in Scotland. They dined at Claridge's together and managed to see so much of each other that all their friends became aware that the friendship had grown very deep.

Mr. Smith bought the late W. C. Whitney's palace—for palace is the only word that applies—at 871 5th av., with all its splendid works of art. He sold off the effects of his house in 52d street, and began to entertain lavishly in his new home. At a grand musicale which he gave in January of last year the women who received his 250 guests were the Duchess of Manchester, Mrs. Rhinelander Stewart, Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse and Mrs. Joseph E. Widener.

SEPARATION OF THE STEWARTS.

Within a few days of this the Stewarts gave a dinner dance to bring out their daughter Anita. The trouble between them dates from this. What brought it on the few who know will not tell, but it was noticed at once that the Stewarts were rarely together and that wherever Mrs. Stewart was there was James Henry Smith. It was, therefore, no great surprise when Mrs. Stewart bought a house at Sioux Falls and sued for divorce. There was no suggestion of any wrong doing on the part of Mr. Stewart, and as incompatibility is about all that must be alleged in South Dakota Mrs. Stewart's divorce was granted a few months ago. Mr. Stewart said nothing about it, but stayed quietly at Bar Harbor. Mr. Smith was in Scotland, and thither rushed Mrs. Stewart as soon as she had her decree. There were whispers that he had been paying attention to a charming unmarried woman and that Mrs. Stewart's rush to the other side was for the purpose of reasserting her charm over him. Be that as it may, the bans were published almost immediately after Mrs. Stewart's arrival in Scotland, and the wedding took place on Sept. 15. The Rev. James Anderson, minister of the parish of Alvie, performed the ceremony, which was as quiet as possible, the only celebration having been bonfires on the hilltops and moors of Dunbarton, which the bridegroom rents from The Mackintosh.

New York expects to see compartively little of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Smith, for it is believed they will buy a house in London and spend much of their time abroad. Yet it is not likely that Mr. Smith will give up his house in this city, for a most all his investments are in American real estate and railroads. His house at Newport is merely rented, but he owns the old T. Saffron Teller house at Tussock.

NOVEL USE FOR AN OLD GRAND PIANO

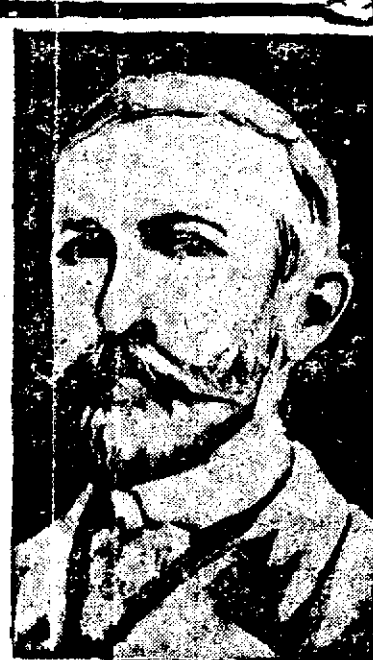

An out-of-town visitor to an East side Settlement House, in New York, was much impressed the other day with the massive elegance of a rosewood table, with heavy, carved legs, which occupied the center of the large living-room or library. Her admiration brought about an explanation from one of the workers to the effect that the table had been made from an old-fashioned square piano which had been presented to them. As its days of usefulness as a musical instrument had long since passed, and as the Settlement had been the recipient of a new upright piano, it was something of a question what should become of the big square piano. Finally one of the clever women interested in the work suggested that it be transformed into a library table.

It was a comparatively easy matter to have the interior mechanism removed, the pedals taken out, and the box of the piano cut down to the level of the keyboard. The two parts of the lid were then laid on and firmly screwed down. Over the top of each screw, to complete the illusion, was glued what looked like a large button of the rosewood. It covered the top of the screw and was decidedly ornamental. The wood for these ornaments was easily found in the framework of the pedals which had been discarded.

The only flaw in such a table is that the top is of necessity in two places, a dividing line its entire length, showing where the original piano top opened. The only remedy for this is to cover the entire length of the table with a runner of some suitable material. In the case in question an 18-inch runner of dark-red felt was laid over the dividing line, but in a more pretentious library such a runner might be of Turkish embroidery or of wreaths of artificial flowers.

What Betty Martin Learned Interviewing Manager Harry Bishop

"I visited every theater of consequence in the country before Ye Liberty was built," said Mr. Harry Bishop, "and got one suggestion here and another there."

"Then you were the designer?"

"Mr. D. F. Oliver was the architect, but he isn't one of the hard and fast kind. He is very open to suggestion, and I found him to be a splendid man to deal with. He carried out my ideas splendidly."

Evidently, Mr Bishop, judging from the manner in which he spoke, is not lacking in previous experience with architects of the kind who are not amenable to expressed desires.

"And the revolving stage?" I questioned, "was that Mr Oliver's idea?"

"The stage is my own invention," announced Mr. Bishop, in quiet, even tones. "It is seventy-five feet in diameter. There is no other like it."

We were standing on the top-most floor of Ye Liberty, and the entire auditorium showed dim in the half light. Women's voices could be heard in the mysterious shadows, and the sound of footsteps mingled with subdued noises from below.

"Turn on the lights," called Mr. Bishop, and immediately the whole theater became flooded with splendor. First one, then another row of lights flashed before us, until one could take in the extent of the building from the farthest end down to the front, where the stage hands were putting final touches to the first scene in "Peaceful Valley." Incidentally, I'd forgotten about dear old Sol Smith Russell, once starring in that self-same play, which he brought out to the old Baldwin! But that was so long ago that the present generation of theater-goers—the young enthusiasts—have no recollections to call back. To them Peaceful Valley is something new, and they cannot make comparisons.

Be that as it may, there was something wonderfully appealing in the old country house, with its wide porches and trailing rose vines. Mrs. Adams—Grace Wis-haar, that was—had the center of the stage when the footlights disclosed the scene, and her presence brought the inquiry as to whether she still continued in her capacity as scenic artist.

"Yes," came the answer, "and she's the only woman artist who does this work. This is the only theater, too, that has made a success of lady ushers."

"I thought they had them in Chicago?"

"They tried it, but failed. You see, we get young girls."

"I've noticed that. They appear to be very quiet and well bred."

"They are," announced Mr. Bishop, with decision. "I wouldn't have any who weren't."

I'm very careful in engaging them. They all come from good homes, and have their parents to look after them. They come here just before the theater opens, and leave immediately after it closes."

"You've been fortunate in getting such good ushers."

"I pay them more than anyone else does," the reply came quickly, "besides, people generally get what they're looking for. If they want good, they find it; if they're looking for the other thing, they find that, too."

As he spoke, Mr. Bishop made a motion as if to descend to the floor below. We'd been standing, talking about the theater and what it means to manage one. As we turned, he called attention to the fact that every aisle had its separate entrance. There is, also, a ladies' parlor on each floor. The seating capacity is about two thousand, which is more than that of any other two-floored theater.

"You will notice," remarked Mr. Bishop, "that in all the new theaters nowadays, the whole lower floor is called the orchestra; there are none of the divisions there used to be."

I hadn't noticed—not until my attention had been called to it, when the advantages of non-division became markedly apparent. However, I am not alone in having "eyes which see not." For instance, there have been many occasions on which I've visited the Liberty, yet I hadn't appreciated any of the things which Mr. Bishop had spoken of, except in a general way. To tell the truth, my prosaic nature had been as much delighted with the width of the chairs and the floor slope as anything else. It is such a comfort in case accident should place one beside a fat woman or

I saw him he wore eye-glasses, dangling from a little gold chain. He speaks in an even monotone, and is chary of smiles, but judging by what the stage folk say, he's one of the kindest-hearted men on earth. Business men, too, speak highly of him, and

"Oh, no. I've been connected with the stage all my life; but not as an actor—I was an actor."

This announcement nearly took me off my feet. All I could say was:

"Really?"

HARRY W. BISHOP, Manager of Ye Liberty Theater.

man, not to be partially sat on during the entire performance of some soul-affecting play. Nothing takes away romance so quickly, not to mention accidental pokes in the ribs, administered by the one of superfluous aver-

So much for Ye Liberty as a theater. To tell the truth, though, I wanted to hear Mr. Bishop talk more about other things than the building. But he is proud of that theater—and well he may be. It is a child of his own conception, and the success it has assumed, as a theatrical venture, may well be claimed by himself. Harry Bishop, however, is a modest man, and averse to talking about personal matters. He had just come in from an automobile trip, and was garbed in the conventional outfit of long coat and cap drawn well down over the eyes. When that he is somewhat of a philosopher is shown not only by the things he does, but also of the sentiments he expresses.

There isn't anything dramatic about his manner of speech: he doesn't gesticulate—not a little bit—but just sits still and talks, and I doubt if he'd do that unless questioned. He mightn't be that way among his intimates, possibly not. Mr. Bishop fights shy of interviewers, I have that at first hand, though not the reason for this disinclination, to talk with newsgatherers.

To look at Harry Bishop, one would never take him for anything but the quiet man of business that he is, but like most people—he has done other things. When I asked him how long he'd been in California, he replied:

"I came here in 1882 with my father."

And then I displayed a most shocking lack of up-to-dateness.

"So this is your first theatrical venture?"

"And I was associated with my father in the management of the Grand Opera House for eight years. It was Morosco's then. After my father's death I took the family name of Bishop."

How could I have been so stupid as not to put two and two together before this! We were sitting down now, in the orchestra chairs, and in the boxes the parlor maids were carefully going over every bit of brass and wood-work, wiping off whatever dust may have adhered. In this act was disclosed another secret of success. Cleanliness, so the old proverb says, is next to Godliness. It's a comfort to know that one can wear a pretty gown and not be forced to sit bolt upright for fear of ruining it. Getting back to Mr. Bishop, he's a perfect mine of theatrical information, although so chary of personal experience. He is not only manager of Ye Liberty, but acts in the same capacity at Idora. In addition, somewhere about holiday-time a new theater, named "The Bell," is to be opened in San Francisco, and it also, is to be under his supervision. Think of what a busy man he must be! The Bell is to be devoted to musical comedy, and the Shubert Company will be first on the boards.

"You're obliged to play a stock company here, aren't you?" I inquired.

The answer came pat: "I play stock because I prefer to."

"But I thought there was a theatrical combination—a trust—"

"I belong to another, almost, if not quite, as powerful. The Shubert combination. But I like stock companies. They are far better."

"And you manage to get pretty good people?"

"Well, like the ushers, I pay my company good salaries. That's the way to get what you want—pay a little more than anybody else does."

Wise man, isn't he. That's the policy of American travelers—and that's why Europeans have little love for us.

"How do you get your people?"

"Oh, from here and there. You know a stock company is always changing—more or less. Sometimes the actor gets dissatisfied—sometimes the management, and when that occurs they part."

"But isn't there always a contract calling for a certain length of time?"

"I never have contracts—they're just engaged and that's all. The stock company is a magnificent school."

"You always manage to have agreeable people in your company."

"It's environment," announced Manager Bishop, with decision. "They come here and, like everybody else, they conform to the standard, no matter what they might be otherwise. It's environment." And the speaker looked about with an air which boded ill for any who did not conform to the ideal standard of at least the outward appearance of what constituted a lady or a gentleman.

"We used to have magnificent stock companies here in the old days," ruminated Mr. Bishop.

"There was the old California company, with its splendid people and the companies that used to come to the Baldwin—how well I remember them—Daly with Ada Rehan, Frohman and Palmer—

Conquest was the star; then he had Lackey, Julia Arthur, Mr. Stoddard and all those people.

"And how San Francisco greeted them! What gowns and jewels were brought out when these pets of the public came West!

"There is nothing like a stock company," declared Mr. Bishop, "to develop talent. It's one of the greatest schools."

"Personality has largely to do with stage folk, hasn't it?" I ventured.

"Yes. But again, personality can be a detriment, too. Look east, for example. You'll find someone whose natural talents appear to have designed them just for a certain character. Some manager takes them up and stars them—and they keep along all ways in this one line. In consequence, they become one-sided. Stocks make for all-round development. The California stock companies are particularly good, and they are easier than the eastern ones—there they have matinees every day in the week—it makes it very hard."

"You occasionally take on inexperienced people, don't you?"

"Very, very seldom. The public can always tell an amateur. Still, there has to be a beginning—it all depends."

"Salaries are pretty good in the theatrical profession, aren't they?"

"Better than in any other."

The answer was most decisive. "And I suppose, as in every other calling, brains and breeding count?"

"Certainly."

"You find, then, social advantages always a great factor?"

"Every time."

"There is one thing, though, that I'd really like to know. Isn't acting, in your opinion a rather precarious method of obtaining a livelihood?"

Mr. Bishop elevated his eyebrows in surprise at this question.

"By no means," replied he, "quite the contrary. I think that a good actor or actress is almost certain of employment all the time. Like in every other profession, there are plenty of hangers-on—incompetents looking for something to do. But there is always a demand for people of ability."

"And what is your idea of the theatrical outlook on this coast?"

"Bright—very bright—there will be plenty of attractions. That is, as soon as theaters enough can be built."

THE THEATERS

HOPE MAYNE, who has returned to the cast at Idora Park.

Manager Oliver Morosco of the Burbank Theater, Los Angeles, returned from New York recently. Mr. Morosco is not at all discouraged by the refusal of the New York critics to accept "The Judge and the Jury" at Wallack's. The play will go on the road next week, playing first-class houses in the larger Eastern cities.

In an interview Mr. Morosco said: "Except for two or three days after the newspapers slated us we did good big business. The company goes on the road this week and will play to first-class houses. More than that, in January 'The Half-Breed' will go on at a Broadway house. I still have faith in 'The Judge and the Jury.' I have reserved the Los Angeles rights, and will present it there again in the spring. It didn't please the New York critics, for two reasons; one, because they are set against anything western—that is, anything that does not originate in New York. Second, because it was so changed that the typical western atmosphere was eliminated and it was made into a parlor melodrama, which it was never intended to be. This, as has been stated, was done by Charles Frohman. Now I haven't a word to say against Mr. Frohman; in fact, I have the highest respect for him as a manager and producer, and many of the suggestions that he made improved the play mightily. But I do know that the elimination of three comedy scenes and the attempt to make gentlemen of rough cowboys did not help the play. Those things, for its road tour, have been replaced in it, and I look for it to make the same success that it did here. Incidentally, I may say that 'The Half-Breed' will have a New York showing later on. Desmond, Ginn and Blanche Hall will not be with the road company. Desmond I have lent to David Belasco for a Broadway production.

"Ginn will go with Kyrie Bellow in 'Brigadier Gerard,' and Blanche Hall will also go with a New York show, for a time at least. These three Los Angeles favorites really were the ones who got the good notices from the New York critics, so you can see the caliber of the players we have here. On my trip I stopped to see every stock company of note in the East, and I want to say in all modesty that not one that I saw comes in the same class, either in membership or production, with two that we have here. The stock companies East are cheap affairs, and their productions are skimmed through, while here we often better the original offering.

"I have a new second woman for the Burbank company, Maude Gilbert. I have also a new leading woman under contract, but I will not mention her name just now. Miss Van Buren, I am happy to say, has consented to take a couple of weeks' rest, and then appear here in a series of big productions, such as 'The Duke of Killbuck' and the like, for about five or six weeks, and I think I will hold back the new leading woman until then."

Fred Zebadie, with the Forepaugh & Sells show, will take time in vaudeville. Robert D. Girard will handle his bookings. Ashley Miller, formerly with Ethel Browning in vaudeville, has accepted a part in the new Ziegfeld production of "A Parisian Model." Huston and Dallas and "The Musical Spielers," as the billing announces them, are substituting at Keeney's Theater in Brooklyn. Kocian, the Bohemian violinist, is reported to have accepted an engagement for the William houses. It will be his first vaudeville appearance. The name of Ned Wayburn's girl act "Daisyland" has been changed to "Daisy Dancers." Dorothy Jordan holds her place at the head of the act as formerly.

Adele Ritchie is seriously contemplating a defection from the cast of "The Social Whirl," and if it comes to pass she will return immediately to vaudeville.

Joseph Murphy has been offered time in vaudeville for his condensed version of "Kerry Gow" by the Keith agency, but will not be ready to open till November.

Mrs. Annie Yeamans will return to vaudeville with her daughter Jennie in the near future. Mrs. Yeamans has recently been out with "The Strenuous Life."

May Walsh, comedienne, has been booked through the Marinelli office for a tour abroad stretching into one and South Africa.

Joe Flynn is playing with "The Boston Belles" of the Eastern Burlesque

Wheel as a special feature during the week that organization holds forth at the Star Theater, Brooklyn.

During the illness of John T. Fynes, Frederic Edward McKay has been called in to do the advance press work heralding the appearance of Lily Langtry at the Fifth-avenue Theater.

On the opening night of "Around the Clock" in Philadelphia, Billie Ritchie, the star of the piece, while making a fall into the orchestra, struck a chair, narrowly escaping serious injury.

When Ida Carle gave up her office in the St. James building she sold her desk to William Morris. On opening it one of Morris' clerks discovered therein a satin-lined tortoise-shell jewel case.

According to a recent program of Keith's Boston theater, which carries a "Lost and Found" department, B. F. Keith has been hard pressed lately. In the "Lost" column is listed "I shirt."

Edgar Selden will be associated with Maurice Shapiro's new music publishing enterprise, which will be ready for business on December 1. The new concern will not confine itself strictly to publishing.

A negro cannot gain admittance to Chase's Theater in Washington. All parts of the house, even the gallery, are barred. It is thought to be the sole vaudeville house in America to draw the color line so sharply.

Sydney M. Hyman, the South African manager, has decided to remain in New York until late in October unless meanwhile he receives a summons from London, where his father is ill. His original intention was to stay here only a week.

Lydia Dreams, the ventriloquist with a feminine name, has a large photograph called "Popularity" upon which are shown 31 heads of variety celebrities.

A GOOD MIXTURE FOR WHITENING THE SKIN

The following directions are given by an expert for the manufacture of a mixture for whitening the skin:

Oil of sweet almonds..... 4 ounces
Fresh cucumber juice..... 10 ounces Essence of cucumber..... 8 ounces
White castile soap (powdered) 1/4 ounce
Tincture of benzoin..... 2-3 dram

Juice of cucumber is obtained by slowly until soft; strain through a fine sieve, and then through cheese cloth. To make the essence, cut cucumbers fine, press juice out with a lemon squeezer; add one ounce of the juice to one ounce of alcohol. Put the essence of cucumber and soap in a large bottle, shake well, let stand several hours and when the soap is dissolved add the cucumber juice. Shake until well mixed, then pour out into an earthen vessel and add the oil and benzoin. Stir until you have a creamy liquid. Keep tightly corked and shake before using.

HOW A SWEATER SHOULD BE WASHED

In washing a sweater, rub thoroughly in warm water and soap suds, rinsing several times to get all the odor of the soap out of the wool. Be sure never to hang up a sweater to dry, as hanging ruins the shape and stretches the garment.

If you can lay the sweater on the grass, having first spread out a heavy towel or a sheet folded. If you must dry it on the fire-escape or in a window, spread out first a newspaper and then cover that with towels or a sheet to keep the water from soaking through, and then lay the sweater on them, not stretched out, but rather in a heap.

Half a day of hot sunshine will dry it, but it must be hot. Don't try to wash a sweater on a cloudy day.

ELOPED SO FATHER COULDN'T WED HER

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 6.—Though the bride's trousseau was waiting and 500 invitations had been issued announcing their wedding to take place next Wednesday, Miss Mary Richardson of Pulaski, Tenn., and E. D. Spoutt of Anderson, S. C., hung conventions to the winds, met here and were married this afternoon. Five minutes later the young bride telegraphed:

"Dear Mamma: Please send me my trunk."

The trunk is on its way, but was preceded by the bride's father, the Rev. Dr. Richardson, who said:

"Why, my children, why on earth couldn't you wait six days longer?"

Then the bride said she ran away because she didn't want her father to marry her, as it would seem sad.

FIFTEEN MINUTES WED. BRIDE ASKS DIVORCE

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Oct. 6.—Fifteen minutes after Miss Amanda E. McClain had become the bride of Walter Johnson she wanted a divorce, because, she said, her husband had taken to drink. Johnson resided at Salem, N. J., and Miss McClain in Norristown.

A few minutes after leaving Magistrate Lenhardt's office, where they were married, the bride rushed into the office holding the marriage certificate in her hand, and begged Magistrate Lenhardt to take it back. With tears in her eyes, she said:

"Why, the man told me he did not drink. I had only been married a few minutes when he pulled a bottle of whiskey out of his pocket and took a drink. He told me he had to do it to keep up his nerve."

Mrs. Johnson said she intended to get a divorce.

TOO FUNNY.
"Mister," said the bruised and battered man, as he entered the newspaper office, "I want you to stop my paper. I can't stand the comic page."
"Why," replied the clerk, in surprise, "our comic page is conceded to be the funniest out."
"That's just it, young man; it is too funny. Why, last night while I was reading some of the jokes in the kitchen, I started to laugh, and, by gosh, I laughed so loud I tilted my chair so far back, upset six jars of gooseberry preserves, knocked down the stove and killed the cat. Take the old woman some more killing jokes, so I can get my better with the ghost."

ALPHA G. CLARK, leading lady at the Macdonough.

new interior will be shown. The color scheme is green and cream gold with new chandeliers. The lobby has been decorated in red and the seats newly upholstered in the same color of a garnet shade.

Word has been received here of the death on September 11 in London of Bonnie Goodwin, an American singer and dancer, who originally went to England as a member of George W. Lederer's "Bells of Bohemia" company in 1901. She afterwards branched out on her own hook with a couple of pickaninnyes and played with much success on the other side.

The Keith office has organized a private detective bureau to watch and report the attendance at the various theaters in opposition to those booked through the Keith office. The Keith employees give out ridiculous statements of the business done at any house but its own, claiming these reports as the basis. In not one instance up to date has any such report as given out been correct.

Irene La Tour met with an accident recently while riding on a street car in Elizabeth, N. J., where "The Way of the Transgressor" company, with which she is engaged, was playing.

Firing glass fell on Miss La Tour's hand, cutting a large wound in which seventeen stitches had to be taken. Miss La Tour has, however, appeared at every performance of the company at the Star Theater, New York, this week.

Yvette Guilbert and Albert Chevalier have both expressed a willingness for another whack at the vaudeville at the conclusion of their forthcoming concert tour. They are agreeable to any proposition that best suits the managers—that is, they will appear together or separately. There is little likelihood of a joint vaudeville engagement of the two stars, as no music hall or vaudeville house could reasonably afford to pay the money each would demand.

An air of independence is spreading about S. Z. Poll. Although several of the managers booking through the Keith office have declared that they would not book acts playing Williams' Orpheum Theater in Boston in opposition to Keith, Poll does not hesitate to say that he will play any act he pleases, regardless of where they have played before and in face of any displeasure Mr. Keith may feel. In one or two cases Mr. Poll expressed himself in strong terms.

Half of the most famous Parisian beauties now boast that they wear no corsets. Among them, says the Boston Herald, are statuesque creatures like Hatto of the Opera, Cora Lapercerie, wife of the port Richepin fils; De Nally, who is supposed to have a simply perfect figure; Dieterle, whom they compare to a Sevres porcelain figurine; the voluptuous Doll; Darnley the classical; little Maud Amy—and big Anna Held. Little and big, slender and plump, they form no particular non-corset type, but seem to be just so many splendid women rejoicing in a new-found grace and freedom.

"The corset is the special enemy of feminine health and beauty," says the divine Hatto. "In future ages they will not believe that women could ever have endured such instruments of torture. The stomach and liver become crushed; the lungs cannot dilate to take in enough oxygen to renew the blood; the diaphragm and the intestines, brutally pushed back, protest in spasmodic contractions. What they used to call 'the vapors'—sudden rushes of blood to the head and frequent faintings—had no other cause; and the neurasthenia of today finds its true beginning in the corset."

"There is a steel corset of the 15th century in the Cluny Museum," says Cora Lapercerie. "It is an unyielding metallic cage, seemingly atrocious. Yet it followed the feminine form, was only dangerous by excess of compression—and it ended above the hips! The present straight corset is far worse. It is a rigid scabbard in which we lose our natural form. The abdomen is suppressed, the croup is thrown back, and the bust is thrown forward!"

At present they are giving a symposium in the Paris daily press, those beauties without corsets. The dainty Dieterle began it by relating to an interviewer the cause of her emancipation. It was the sight of a stout and florid matron of fifty-five years trying to get into a corset that had been made expressly "to her measure."

"I finked it up. You understand, the corset had been put on loose. Then, as her maid stood ready with the strings, the sufferer reached down inside and pulled up some abdomen. The maid began to pull the strings. The martyr fetched up some more abdomen. The maid laced tighter. And so, in time, she got her abdomen displaced miraculously, in a word, transformed into bust!"

It seems that Dieterle's doctor had been showing her some diagrams representing the compression of the organs by the modern straight corset. The two object lessons made a great impression on her.

"When one stands straight, the organs are crushed and pushed out of place, but it was nothing to the second diagram, showing how the slightest movement forward horribly increases the compression. Out! I took my corset off!"

Up to sixteen years of age the voluptuous Doll lived in the Montmartre quarter and posed for some artists.

"In those days I wore no corset," she says. "It is the acme of the perfect model, you know, seize and pas de corset! I know well, therefore, that artists will not look on a model whose form has been modified by corset wearing. They say it is horribly ugly. Their ideal of beauty is the Venus de Milo and the Winged Victory."

sil—and here we begin to have the other side of the story. "Hum! hum! We all have been bored with the Venus and the Victory. Once an artist friend told me about them once too often. He had a fine life-size copy of the Venus of Milo. "Let us dress her! I said, to teach him a lesson. I put a smart skirt on her, stylishly pinned up and adjusted, then a shirt waist and stylish bolero—and she was a sight, his Venus! "Would you walk out in the street with such a thick waisted creature?" I asked; and his silence was eloquent. There you are. There seems to be a mystery hidden in this wonderful reform. When we look at these modern Paris beauties without corsets, when we listen to their boasts of suppleness, of natural grace and freedom and of bounding health, we are almost persuaded that the lovely specimens have hit upon a wonderful aesthetical as well as hygienic secret, unit—ties, glowing with health, strength and stamina, like Renes-Despres, Jeanne Pierat and Lucie Clairval, declares that their bodies have never suffered a jot from compression, I begin to get mixed up. And when I study the plump perfection of a Louise Mante or a Marguerite Bressil or a Tardieu-Bauger, I am almost persuaded that the corset embellishes!

as one's figure changes constantly, you must have new corsets made for you continually—at least once every six months."

This she said for women of moderate incomes. It is best for such to economize on no matter what other article of dress or object of luxury.

"The corset is woman's best friend," she continued. "As to the modern straight variety, it must, of course, be well adjusted to the body for which it is made. The old-style corset may have stomach; but the straight corset produces some harm by pushing in the tectis the stomach and leaves it quite free."

"It is very much a question of bust," declares the plump Bressil. "Of course you find artists' models growing up without a corset and possessing fine busts; we fall to hear about those who grow up corseted at the price of losing the natural form."

For a young girl who is developing it is simply a question of taking risks, depending on the strength of the fibers and the weight they are called on to hold up!"

And here comes in the famous "throat-sustainer" which, if Louise Mante is not mistaken, is the secret of the suppleness of form of more than one of these Parisian beauties who boast that they wear no corset.

"Their pretensions make me smile," says the rounded and plumpet star of the Grand Opera ballet. "No one will accuse me of not being always in condition," she explains arrogantly. "I have two hours daily of the hardest muscular exercise—the essential daily training of every danseuse—at the bar, like any beginner. We all have to do it. Every muscle of my body is at my command. My waist must be flexible."

For this reason she claims the right to speak of corsets with authority.

"When these non-corsetted beauties possess busts of any volume," she says, "be sure they protect them with the 'soutien-gorge'—making use of the delicate Parisian name of 'throat-sustainer.'"

The device may, in a way, be likened to a kind of underwear bolero, very short and high, suspended from the shoulders—and clasping and sustaining the bust.

"And these women who do not wear corsets keep their waists by means of whaleboned girdles!" laughs the solid corset-wearing danseuse of the Opera. "There you are! The soutien-gorge may be compared to the upper part of a corset. The whaleboned girdle may be assimilated to the waist of a corset. Yet they wear no corset!"

For that matter, there are those of the non-corset group who confess the use of substitutes.

ROYAL HOUSEKEEPING.

To a mere man on this side of the Atlantic, the arrangement of the armistices and contracts with the cook is something, says the Housekeeper, not to be lightly thought of, and, except in rare instances, to be shifted to other shoulders. Now what would this mere man think, or do, if he had to order every meal for the family, and there were 300 cooks to prepare it! And yet, the American men are declaring every day that the czar of all the Russias lacks executive ability and that if he is not careful the Douna will be of a great deal more importance than he! Perhaps they do not realize that his time is taken up with far more difficult affairs than the mere running of a state. It is said that the czarina never orders a meal, but that, every morning, a major of the army, selected by the czar, is called into the royal presence and given the menu of the day by the emperor himself. Then the major goes to the kitchen and he and the chef post the menu in a prominent place. Then each under-chef selects the dish that comes in his department and proceeds to give orders. The kitchen has 300 cooks, and in a few moments they are all busy. We of America are apt to think of royalty as an idle class. But just think of managing 300 cooks! It might even be a winning point for some manager of a lecture course to invite the czar to come to this country to speak of household economics.

CIVILIZATION'S SACRIFICE.

According to the Machinists Monthly Journal, more men are killed in Allegheny county, Pa., every year than fell in many of the great battles of history. Last year 3000 men were killed and injured in the steel and iron mills and blast furnaces. In other mills the casualties numbered 4000. Railroad employees killed or injured: the count during the same year numbered 4200, making a grand total of 11,200 men killed or injured in the pursuit of civilization.
